U.S. charter boat ban boon to B.C.

By AL FORREST

Local marina owners today said a federal fisheries order Friday banning U.S. charter fishing boats from B.C. waters will mean millions of dollars in extra revenues for local industry.

It may also end the controversy over whether the big, factory-style U.S. boats are taking more than their fair share of B.C. salmon.

The ban was announced in Vancouver by Dr. Wally Johnson, director general of the department of fisheries and oceans, Pacific region.

The U.S. has prohibited Canadian charter vessels in its waters.

Starting immediately, Americans — other than those who use their own, licensed "family boats" — will have to use B.C. boats and docks for fishing excursions.

This means they will be buying local supplies, hiring B.C. guides and frequently staying in Vancouver Island hotels.

In addition, it will be easier to check on whether they are keeping within the possession limit of 25 pounds of processed fish — or eight salmon, more than 12 inches long.

Last summer B.C. fishermen angrily charged that American charter boats were catching more than the allowed limits of salmon, processing it on board and sailing home with it or flying it out of the country on seaplanes.

Marina operators said the ban on large vessels was long overdue because of the ban on B.C. charter boats in the U.S.

"We have been looking forward to this decision for some time," said Angus Matthews of Oak Bay Marina.

"This will be a big boost for local industry."

Rob Waters, manager of Pedder Bay Marina, said Canadians have been concerned about the growing number of Americans who flew into B.C. waters and boarded a U.S. charter vessel for a quick fishing excursion.

"They would process salmon on board and ship it out of the country as quickly as they could. With the price of fish that was a valuable catch and it was difficult to check up on them."

Waters said the decision is timely because there will be a halt to sport fishing for at least one month off Oregon and Washington this summer to give commercial fishermen there a chance for a larger catch.

This will result in a larger-than-usual number of American sport fishermen coming into B.C. at the height of the fishing season.

Kevin Storrie, a guide and operator of a fishing gear store in Campbell River said the new ruling will be a boon to business.

And guide Gary Dewling agreed the ban probably can improve business here because American tourists will be forced to use Canadian boats and guides.

Bryon Armstrong, owner of Painter's Lodge applauded the ban but expressed concern Americans might be able to spot a possible loophole in the new law.

"Will this mean a U.S. charter company can form a company in Canada? It's not a costly procedure to set up a corporation and register vessels in B.C."

Rig search called off

STAVANGER, Norway (UPI) — The air search for survivors of the world's worst oil rig disaster was called off today with a feared death toll of 124 people.

Of the 213 rig workers aboard the Alexander Keilland "floating hotel" which capsized in a storm Thursday, 89 survived, 39 have been found dead and 85 were still missing.

One body was found today and two were spotted inside the rig but could not be reached by divers.

Six helicopters and two surveillance planes swept repeatedly over the area Friday but returned to base today. The 10,105-ton, pentagon-shaped rig was moored 175 miles southwest of Stavanger.

Of 40 ships that scoured the area around the overturned rig Friday, only 20 remained today and it was expected that many of these would not be used when the search resumes Sunday.

Only two or three of the 39 bodies have been identified, a spokesman for the rescue operation said.

The leg of the rig which sheared off, causing the accident, will be towed into Stavanger Sunday, to be examined by experts trying to find out why the Alexander Keilland capsized.

"Our judgment is there's very little likelihood of life on board the Kielland at this moment," said Forrest C. Morgen, drilling and production manager for the Phillips Petroleum Co., the rig's operator.

Morgen said a last hope the men had been able to survive in air pockets inside the concrete structure was dashed when divers found most of the windows had been smashed.

Divers tapped the sunken superstructure hoping to hear signs of life.

There was no reply.

Most of those on board when one of the rig's support legs snapped, causing the structure to topple over and sink in hurricane force winds Thursday night, were Norwegians.

As darkness fell Friday and the winds whipped up again only the broken leg and the four pontoons, like a giant elephant's four feet, were visible above the choppy waves.

No one could survive in the icy churning waters for more than two or three minutes without special gear, rescue officials said.

Constable guilty of assault

A county court jury Friday found Sidney RCMP Constable Grant Bottrell, 29, guilty of two charges of assault causing bodily harm.

Bottrell will be sentenced May 2.

The charges were laid in connection with injuries to a man being escorted to the detachment last May 1.

David Dean Krenbrink, 23, was treated for a broken cheekbone and head injury.

Krenbrink claimed Bottrell struck him with a wooden nightstick, then kicked him.

The jury retired at 2:10 p.m. after hearing a two-hour, 50-minute charge by Judge Leslie Cashman, and a review of evidence and submissions by counsel.

At 3:55 the jury returned for further re-instruction and retired again shortly after 4 p.m.

The jury finally brought in its verdict after midnight.

Volcano spits out boulders

COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — Volcanic activity on Mount St. Helens subsided early today after rocks and boulders were lobbed hundreds of metres into the air and soot was deposited on the ground as far as 80 kilometres away.

Glen Izette of Denver, Colo., a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, said a plume seen rising from the volcano through cloud cover Friday night was gone by the time he went up in an airplane for a reconnaissance flight at 12:30 a.m. He said the 2,950-metre volcano remains hidden behind clouds.

Throughout the three-hour flight, Izette said he saw no sign of further eruptions. He added that it appeared to be the longest quiet period for Mount St. Helens since Thursday.

Asked whether the sudden quiet meant a more substantial outburst could be in the works, Izette said: "Some volcanos are characterized by that . . . a long rest period, followed by a more intense episode."

After 123 years of silence, the volcano put on a lively show Thursday and Friday without doing any reported damage.

"All day long the old beast has just perked along, like a coffee pot," Tom Sayre, a U.S. Forest Service officer in Vancouver, Wash., said Friday.

No injuries or damage to property were reported.

Dan Miller of the U.S. Geological Survey's Volcanic Hazard Project said he saw rocks and boulders popping from a crater that had opened Thursday near the summit. The material, most of it about one metre in diameter, soared up through a 150-metre cloud cover, then dropped back to within 200 metres of the crater.

Sayre said scientists would continue to monitor the mountain on the weekend while roads remained closed near the peak, located 80 kilometres north-northeast of Portland, Ore. He said roads had been clogged with sightseers.

Visit the stars

Bette Midler is a strong candidate for the Academy Award for best actress this year.

She was known mainly as a singer until she was given the starring role in The Rose, a story based very loosely on the life of Janis Joplin.

Set in the late 1960s, the movie evokes a troubled era and Midler won raves for her convincing portrait.

Ironicly, she has had difficulty making her way as an actress and once took a year of psychoanalysis when she was unable to get any roles.

As a singer, however, she has always done well.

Because of her impact in The Rose it would be no real surprise if she upset favored Sally Field for the Oscar.

Readers who correctly predict the Oscar winners for best actress, actor and movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood in an annual contest sponsored by the Victoria Times and VI*90.

Dairy prices to jump

OTTAWA (CP) - Retail prices for butter, cheese and other dairy products will be increased because of increased payments to dairy farmers announced Friday by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

Butter will increase 3.6 cents a pound and skim powder about two cents a pound. Other manufactured dairy products such as cheese, yogurt, cottage cheese and ice cream will also rise.

The price for fluid milk is not affected because it is controlled by provincial milk marketing boards.

But producers of industrial milk — used to manufactured dairy products — will start receiving an extra 38 cents a hundredweight from processors starting Tuesday.

Super cop versus super thief saga

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The 13-month saga of a super cop dogging the trail of a super thief ended this week when John Arthur MacLean went to prison for 3,000 burglaries that netted him $133 million in jewels.

"I didn't feel any great elation after I arrested him," said Detective Arthur McLellan. "I enjoyed working against a pro, and John is the top pro. He's the super thief. It was the most challenging case I've ever worked."

For McLellan, a Fort Lauderdale robbery detective with 17 years experience, John Arthur MacLean presented a supreme challenge.

For openers, MacLean has an IQ of 167. He's an electronics genius, an experienced pilot, a skilled driver of high-speed boats, cars and motorcycles, a meticulous planner and an expert appraiser of fine jewelry.

"In 6½ years, he committed 3,000 burglaries and was responsible for $133 million in thefts along the eastern seaboard from the Florida Keys to Maine," McLellan said. "He also did a few jobs around Sarasota, Bradenton and Tampa.

"The only thing John would take was jewelry or money, and sometimes an antique gun. He wouldn't touch silver or paintings — just fine jewelry — and he was fastidious enough that it would be two or three days before most people knew they had been hit."

His biggest single haul was $5.8 million worth of jewelry from the "One Of A Kind" jewelry store in Provincetown, Cape Cod, in July of 1978.

MacLean, 33, lived well on the fruit of his crimes.

He owned a $100,000 vacation home in Venlehaven, Maine, a 36-foot offshore racing boat, a helicopter, an amphibious airplane, several luxury cars, two four-wheel-drive vehicles, six powerful motorcycles and a $40,000 motor home that McLellan said "were just toys to him."

"He stole for the thrill of it," McLellan said. "He believed in non-violence and never used a gun except in the Wold case, and then it was his accomplices."

The Wold caper was MacLean's downfall. That's when McLellan got on his trail.

On Jan. 27, 1979, two gunmen and MacLean barged into the Fort Lauderdale home of Dr. Keith Wold. The trio bound Wold and were methodically looting

Lalonde sets stage for oil battle

EDMONTON (UPC) — A classic energy pricing confrontation between the federal and Alberta governments looms following a federal move to end guaranteed world prices for synthetic crude oil produced by Alberta oil sands plants.

Federal Energy Minister Marc Lalonde, preparing to negotiate a new price regime with Alberta, announced in Ottawa Friday that the Liberal government was invoking "force majeure" clauses in oil sands agreements to end the world price guarantees.

Those agreements date from 1976 when the federal, Alberta and Ontario governments invested hundreds of millions of dollars, gave tax breaks and guaranteed world prices to save the skidding Syncrude project.

Since then, prices for oil produced by Syncrude and Suncor — the only two active oil sands projects — have climbed to $36 per barrel, well above normal world prices because of the high quality of synthetic crude.

"I'm angry," was the immediate response from Alberta Energy Minister Merv Leitch. "Mr. Lalonde, by this move, has summoned two very large, very dark clouds. He has put one over the anticipated energy agreement between us, and one over future oil sands plants."

However, Premier Peter Lougheed had set the scene for the negotiating atmosphere with an earlier threat to hold up approval for future oil sands plants to force Ottawa to grant Alberta the same benefits to which the defeated Conservative administration had agreed.

Lalonde said his announcement was consistent with the Liberals' "general commitment we made during the election campaign that future prices in Canada would not be tied to international prices.

"What we are saying is that we will not be tied in the future to what happens with the international price so far as the price coming from the oil sands is concerned," he said.

The federal minister said the announcement was the first phase of the blended oil-price the Liberal government hopes to achieve before its first budget is brought down in late June or early July.

The blended price would take into account the cost of imported oil, oil from conventional wells, oil sands production and oil from expensive frontier areas.

Lalonde said a new synthetic crude price would be negotiated as part of the overall pricing package being negotiated with Alberta.

But Leitch hinted Alberta would not have saved Syncrude if it had anticipated Friday's move.

"The decision of Alberta to be an equity partner is clearly related to the price of oil," he said. "We entered into the Syncrude agreement with the understanding it would attract world prices."

The federal decision puts thousands of jobs in jeopardy, "not just in Alberta, but jobs in the whole of Canada," Leitch said.

One of the Syncrude partners, Gulf Canada Resources Inc., charged that there was "absolutely no justification" for the federal government's move.

He said Syncrude was in a "substantial loss position" after 18 months of operation that was interrupted by production problems and a recent shutdown because of a massive explosion and fire at a key pumping station.

Alberta Liberal leader Nick Taylor backed Lalonde's move saying it is "a step in the right direction to put a ceiling on oil sands prices — they' don't have to go that high."

The federal government is apparently not alone in believing there is no hurry to increase oil prices. Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani said Thursday he sees no reason for an immediate world price increase.

"I think the market now is coming down," he said.

Vogel probe sought by justice council

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Justice Council has called for an independent inquiry into allegations that deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel showed favoritism in his office.

Chairman Setty Pendakur said Friday the council is not satisfied with a departmental inquiry which cleared Vogel of interfering in the course of justice.

Justice councils, which were established in all areas of the province by the former NDP government, are comprised of laymen who monitor the operation of the justice system in their communities.

Allegations that Vogel favored certain persons in connection with the disposition of charges involving drinking-driving were first made in a CBC television report.

Attorney-General Allan Williams has said he is satisfied Vogel did not act improperly. Vogel has given notice of his intention to file a libel suit against the CBC and its reporter Chris Bird.

The CBC report said Vogel tried to influence the disposition of a case in which Kootenay lawyer Mickey Moran was charged with impaired driving and another in which Andrew Rigg, 17, of Vancouver was charged with a drinking-driving offence.

Saga of a super thief

the wealthy physician's home when their radios alerted them they had tripped a silent alarm and police were en route to the scene.

The three men stuffed $1 million of Wold's possessions in a pillow case and escaped in cars driven by accomplices and MacLean's girlfriend, Carol Fischer.

But in their haste to flee the doctor's home, one of MacLean's accomplices forgot his radio. It was an unusual radio and the only clue McLellan had.

"He installed special crystals in the radio so he could monitor police channels and transmit to his accomplices on an unusual frequency," McLellan said.

The 37-year-old detective consulted electronics experts and spent four weeks tracing the crystals to their manufacturer, which conveniently turned out to be Savoy Electronics of Fort Lauderdale. That was the easy part.

McLellan then checked a total of 92,516 Savoy sales receipts before finding MacLean's order for the special crystal.

A short time later, the detective got another break. MacLean placed another crystal order with Savoy.

"I staked out the place and spent 10 hours a day for a week and a half before he showed up. That was the first time I laid eyes on him," McLellan said.

On March 16, 1979, McLellan got a search warrant for MacLean's modest, but carefully maintained home. Getting inside proved difficult.

"He had an alarm system that if you or I were to put it in would cost about $30,000," McLellan said. "Once we got inside, we found 5,000 pieces of jewelry worth about $1 million, including some jewelry from the Wold robbery.

"Normally he would fence the jewelry within 24 hours for three cents on the dollar. But his fence had disappeared for two months and he couldn't unload the stuff."

McLellan arrested MacLean the next day. MacLean's girlfriend was granted immunity and testified against the super thief at his trial. MacLean was convicted of the Wold heist and last Thursday, Circuit Judge Leroy Moe sentenced him to 15 years in prison.

B.C. mill rate dips

The provincial government has reduced its province-wide mill rate to 1.295, down 9.4 per cent from last year's rate of 1.43, Finance Minister Hugh Curtis has announced.

With property values going up, the mill rate can be brought down and still bring in sufficient revenues, he said.

the weather

Cool and unstable air moving down from the northwest will result in generally cloudy conditions and isolated shower activity over much of the province today. Gradual improvement is forecast as a ridge of high pressure builds along the coast and only a few clouds are expected tonight. Sunday will see more cloud spread across the province in advance of a Pacific disturbance tracking towards the north coast.

Listeners 16 years late in heading for the hills

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Radio listeners in this community headed for the hills Friday after hearing that a tidal wave was approaching — but what they heard was a report on a tidal wave which occurred 16 years ago.

One man ran to the local airport, hoping to charter a plane to rescue his friends down the Alberni Inlet.

CJAV was broadcasting a documentary on the tidal wave 16 years ago. The documentary began with a simulated news report on the approach of the wall of water — and at that moment a local British Columbia Hydro substation failed, blacking out the Alberni Valley.

Power was restored five minutes later, but by that time a lot of people were on their way to high ground.

The radio station said it had promoted the tidal wave documentary, but it seems a substantial number of people had not heard about it. When electricity was restored, the station started the program again from the beginning.

However, 10 minutes later it was forced to interrupt the show again to offer another reassurance that there was no tidal wave and that the program was only a dramatization.

Uproar breaks on Pepin for abandoning Rupert

OTTAWA (CP) — A decision by Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin to back out of a federal promise to provide funds for a badly-needed grain terminal at Prince Rupert is being roundly condemned.

Four New Democratic Party MPs joined the chorus of criticism Friday, saying they fear the Pepin decision could jeopardize construction of a new terminal at Ridley Island near Prince Rupert. The terminal is crucial to increased grain exports for Prairie farmers.

Pepin announced this week the new Liberal government would not honor a pledge of $43 million for the terminal made by the previous Progressive Conservative government in January.

The NDP charged that Pepin has reverted to the stand of a previous Liberal transport minister, Otto Lang, that users of the terminal should pay for the various services the government was going to provide.

But Lang-style user-pay policies and the Liberals were soundly rejected in the last two elections in the West and "the Liberal party has no mandate to re-introduce that policy now," the statement said.

It was issued by Jim Fulton, whose Skeena riding includes Prince Rupert, Les Banjamin, the party's transportation spokesman, Vic Althouse, agriculture critic, and Lorne Nystrom, food spokesman.

Earlier, Dr. William Hick, chairman of the Prince Rupert Grain Co-ordination Committee, said powerful lobbying within the transport department bureaucracy caused the reversal on Prince Rupert.

Hick said the bureaucrats deeply resented the Prince Rupert development "because it didn't do anything for their greater glory."

Hick said that if Pepin doesn't live up to the terms of the Prince Rupert agreement reached by the Conservatives with a consortium of Prairie grain companies, the consortium "will back right off."

"The project is not viable if they have to pay any part of the infrastructure costs," Hick said.

The NDP MPs said the Liberals promised during the Feb. 18 election campaign to work for an immediate start on the Prince Rupert terminal.

In one stroke, Pepin has thrown the plan into doubt, they said.

"My reaction to that isn't printable," Prince Rupert Mayor Peter Lester said in a telephone interview Friday. "The damage is not only to Prince Rupert, or to the province of B.C. through the loss of a coal port. The loss is national."

Lester said Pepin's reversal of policy will delay the project for a full year if construction is not begun by late May.

The Prince Rupert Grain Co-ordination Committee, a local community group, expressed fear that Pepin's proposal for user pay financing could destroy the planned development of a major grain port, crucial to increased grain exports for Prairie farmers.

Both the grain committee and Fulton said Pepin's approach for pay-as-you-go financing could discourage Prince Rupert Grain Ltd., a six company consortium, from going ahead with construction plans.

Yukon test set on separation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western National Association, which advocates the separation of the western provinces the territories from the rest of Canada, will test the Yukon mood this summer.

Party secretary Stan Bennett says the association will conduct a newspaper survey of Yukoners on the question of separation, and he expects separation will be supported three-to-one.

Bennett says optimism in the party is running high.

Referring to a write-in poll conducted by the New Westminster Columbian, he said of 740 letters received, about 70 per cent favored independence for the West.

And, he said, when party leader Doug Christie appeared on radio open-line shows in Vancouver, Calgary and Regina, phone-in response averaged two-to-one in favor of separation.

The surveys all took place after the Trudeau government returned to power.

The association — formerly the Committee for Western Independence — is so elated with the results it plans to field candidates in upcoming provincial elections, after deciding in February to become a political party.

Christie, 34, a Victoria lawyer with a longstanding interest in Canadian politics — "I was 12 years old when I started corresponding with John Diefenbaker." — says he is tired of what he sees as a static eastern power base.

"Talk of accommodation (with the West) has never been anything but talk," he says.

"One principal of politics is that power stays where it is until there is no alternative but change.

"In my view we are clinging to what we don't like rather than taking an uncertain future."

And the media is overly conservative where Western separatism is concerned, and in some cases is "near hysteria" over the issue, he says.

On relations with the U.S., Christie says: "American involvement is not a threat to us, without it, Western Canada wouldn't be what it is."

Adds Bennett: "Western Canada could be a very important country, both strategically and with respect to resources."

Policemen negotiators quit after 55% 'no' vote

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Negotiators for the Vancouver Policemen's Union have stepped down after the membership's surprise rejection of a recommended settlement that would have made them the highest-paid policemen in Canada.

The 930-member union voted Friday to reject the report from industrial inquiry commissioner Judge Donald McTaggart after the union executive had recommended its acceptance.

"We had recommended acceptance (of the report) and now we have to take this as a vote of non-confidence," said Detective John Catterall, secretary-treasurer of the union.

He said a new negotiating committee would likely be elected when the union meets next week to consider its next move.

McTaggart was appointed in January by Labor Minister Jack Heinrich in an effort to reach a solution to a contract dispute between the union and the city's police board.

Catterall said the members voted by a 55 per cent margin to reject the commission's report and now had three options.

The union could take another strike vote at its meeting Tuesday, resume bargaining with the police board or ask that the dispute be taken to binding arbitration.

In December, the union voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action to back contract demands, but Heinrich intervened by appointing McTaggart.

Under provincial labor law, the union must strike within 90 days of its strike vote or take another vote. That 90 days has passed, but Catterall said the meeting Tuesday could result in a new strike vote.

The union had been asking for a 13.6 per cent wage increase and an additional five per cent in benefits in a one-year contract. The police board had offered 14.5 per cent in a two-year contract.

McTaggart's recommendation, Catterall said, called for an increase of 11.2 percent in wages and 1.7 per cent in benefits in one year. If the report had been accepted, the policemen would have become the highest paid in Canada.

In Victoria, Heinrich said he was surprised and disappointed that the union had rejected the report. He said he hoped the union would change its mind when it meets April 1.

2,4-D use on milfoil appealed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group of environmental organizations has appealed permits granted to the British Columbia Water Investigations Branch to apply a herbicide to Eurasian water milfoil in two Okanagan lakes.

The South Okanagan Environmental Coalition, claims the herbicide 2,4-D, causes cancer and should not be used in Kalamalka and Wood Lakes.

John Warnock, director of research for the coalition, said the group will introduce new data at its appeal.

"Much of the new data reveals that 2,4-D causes miscarriages, stillbirths and birth defects at very low levels, even at the .1 parts per million level, the so-called safe drinking water level now established in Canada," he said.

Baby market out: McCarthy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Friday she will recommend new legislation or further tightening up of regulations to prevent establishment of a private adoption market for babies.

Mrs. McCarthy said her ministry is working with the attorney-general's ministry on the issue "so we can ensure that in B.C., babies are not for sale and will not be for sale."

"I'm adamant that it be enshrined in legislation," she said in an interview from Victoria.

The minister was commenting on the newspaper advertisement placed by Vancouver lawyer Joel Kerbel asking mothers of unborn babies to contact his office on behalf of clients who wish to adopt a child.

Kerbel ran similar ads in 1978, which led to the stiffening of adoption regulations.

Mrs. McCarthy said Kerbel's recent ad gives people in the community the unfair and cruel expectation that babies are available just by responding to an ad.

Kerbel's ad indicated his clients are prepared to pay pre-natal expenses to an expectant mother wanting to give up her child for adoption, and would assure a first-class home for the child.

Kerbel said Thursday he had a frank, private discussion with Pat Murray, deputy superintendent of child welfare, over the ad he ran.

"I discussed the procedures I was using and also discussed the nature of services offered by the human resources department," Kerbel said.

He said he suggested to the department that no child should be removed from the province in relation to a change of guardianship or custody outside the province without permission of the superintendent of child welfare.

"If that's his interest, it isn't met by the ad he placed," Mrs. McCarthy said.

About 95 per cent of all adoptions in B.C. now are handled through the human resources ministry. Private adoptions must be reported immediately to the superintendent of child welfare.

Temporary repairs to ore ship

VANCOUVER (CP) — The damaged Japanese ore carrier Yasukawa Maru will undergo temporary repair by Burrard Yarrows Corp., so it can be sailed back to Japan for unloading and drydocking for full repair.

A spokesman for the North Vancouver shipyard said Friday that repair crews will begin work next week to make internal repairs to a damaged ballast tank.

Drydocking for permanent repair work would not be possible without unloading the ship's cargo of 48,000 tonnes of iron ore. In its current state, the vessel is too heavy to drydock in North Vancouver and too deep in the water to be drydocked in Esquimalt, the spokesman said.

The 32,163 gross ton vessel was ordered back to port last week by the coast guard after a marine surveyor made an inspection of the ship, which had broken down in Hecate Strait, between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the B.C. mainland.

The inspection showed it was taking on water through a port ballast tank, which was badly corroded, and there were five small fractures to plates below the waterline.

Afton crews back at work

KAMLOOPS (CP) — About 270 employees returned to work Friday at Afton Mines, ending a week-long wildcat strike triggered by the suspension of a miner after an argument with a foreman.

The United Steelworkers of America members voted Thursday to return after meetings were set up between the union and management to discuss workers' complaints.

Mailbox obsolescence

So the letter you mailed to Nanaimo arrived 2½ weeks later. The inside postal workers are about to begin contract negotiations again, and what do you bet the price of mail service will go up again after that.

Fear not. Help may be on the way — in two years or in 20.

The technology is already available to switch from the drop-it-in-a-postbox, have-it-delivered-at-your-door system of mail delivery to instantaneous, electronic mail transmission. Some experts from the U.S. post office believe that four-fifths of the mail the office handles could be transmitted electronically within two years. British experts think 20 years is probably a more reasonable timetable for conversion to the electronic systems.

Two versions of electronic mail are now technologically feasible. In one, the sender types a message on a computerised typewriter, then dials the recipient's phone number. The message is sent down the line and printed out on the recipient's computerized typewriter.

In the other version, the sender writes his message on an ordinary typewriter. The paper is then put in a facsimile machine. The message that emerges at the other end of the telephone line looks like a photocopy of the original. The great advantage of this system at the moment is that it can be used for long-distance and even intercontinental messages.

The French government, which appears to be the most advanced in the field, is hoping that models of both types which the average household can afford will be available soon. The Japanese government is also extremely enthusiatic about its possibilities.

The experts claim that for speed, ease of use, and reliability, the electronic systems are competitive with standard post offices. The difference is that they are much more expensive. However, the experts believe that like pocket calculators, the unit cost will fall as technology improves and demand grows.

Some major difficulties remain to be worked out. Suitable alternative employment would have to be found for the thousands of letter-sorters and letter-carriers who would lose their jobs. During the transition stage, some method would have to be found of continuing to deliver mail to households who didn't want, or still couldn't afford, electronic systems.

A system would have to be found for the transmission of printed periodicals who now send copies to their subscribers through the mail. That which would be affordable for one person sending the occasional letter would probably not be affordable for a publishing company wanting to send dozens of pages to thousands of subscribers.

It seems essential that the Canadian government begin planning policy for electronic mail delivery now. Instead of waiting for the problems of the new system to be upon us, it should be looking at these problems and others.

Greenpeace missed the target

By A. T. BERGERUD

In the past months public attention has been focussed on the Spatsizi Park caribou herds, due to an unsuccessful attempt by Greenpeace to halt hunting. They justified the confrontation partially on the basis that I had recommended to the government that the hunting season be closed. However, hunting is only part of the problem.

I have been active in research and management of caribou in Canada since 1956, and have conducted studies in Newfoundland, Labrador, Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories. In 1977 I conducted field studies on the status and productivity of most of herds in British Columbia. I found that from a high of about 20,000 animals in 1970 the total B.C. population had declined fifty per cent by 1977.

Two reasons

The decline was due to overhunting, and poor calf survival because of predation. The primary reason for the reduction of the local herds in Spatsizi was low calf survival, which averaged only six per cent between 1975 and 1979. Each year at least ten percent of the calves must survive to balance the natural mortality rate of adults.

In 1977 and 1979 eighty percent of the mature females gave birth to healthy calves. These calves did not die because of disease or exposure to weather, but by July of each year most had been killed. I watched wolves and grizzly bears hunting young caribou, the mainstay of their diet. In 1979 I put radio collars on newborn calves. The radios sent a distress radio call when the transmitter was motionless for one hour, so that I was able to find dead calves and confirm that they were killed by wolves and bears.

As a result of my recommendations the hunting of females was prohibited and a limited-entry license quota for males was established which reduced the kill last year to nineteen animals or one percent of the herd (from a previous three percent).

However, even the complete elimination of hunting will fail to halt the population decline. My recommendations for the closure of hunting was only made in the framework of government management of the wolf population, so that more calves would survive. Of course, the real question is whether the public will let the government take steps to manage predator as well as prey.

In the controversy created by Greenpeace no mention was made of the most serious mortality factor, the loss of calves to predators. Last year only 34 animals were counted in the herd in nearby Edziza Park and no calves survived at all. This herd is not hunted; but it will soon be extinct.

Greenpeace appears to be using this issue as an emotional club to further anti-hunting views, with little regard for the wellbeing of the animals concerned. Furthermore, because the debate has been colored with emotion and confrontation tactics there is now real danger that government options will be diminished, and that future decisions will be based on political expediency rather than on scientific grounds.

Finally, this controversy has divided conservation groups in British Columbia. We are faced with major environmental problems: plans are on the drawing boards to dam the Liard and Stikine Rivers and flood caribou habitat.

Time to unite

This is not the time to alienate groups of guides, outfitters, and sportsmen who are genuinely concerned not only about caribou conservation, but also about the land the caribou treks.

Greenpeace could really help the cause of caribou by using their political expertise to call attention to the serious lack of government funds provided to the Fish and Wildlife Branch. At present biologists do not have the money to count the herds annually or even monitor calf survival. These are essential conservation needs. I will wager that less money is spent on wildlife in British Columbia, as a percentage of total government income, than in any other province in Canada. Here is the proper arena for political action.

Allan Fotheringham

New faces poised, powdered

OTTAWA — Certainly Propitious to bump into you, Dr. Fotheringham.

What exactly is the phanatasmagorical vaccuumitology of your ignorance?

Well, I was going to commisserate with you. I guess it must be pretty tough for a reporter to dredge up any excitement these days, what with a majority government in power for four years and all the leaders fully backed by their caucuses.

Are you kidding? The Tory caucus is bubbling like a rice pudding. Harvie Andre, the Calgary MP who is a card-carrying Clarkian, is bustling about bad-mouthing Bob Coates, the Tory party president.

Why would that be?

Delay tactics

Because, silly, Coates, is not exactly a card-carrying Clarkian and is polling the party exectutive, trying to find a way around the Joe Clark wish for an early party convention and vote of confidence in his leadership.

You mean to say . . . ?

Natch. The Joe Clark Boy Scout wing of the party out-clevered itself. Instead of the guy they wanted, they got the guy they tolerated. Now he's nipping at their heels. Those who live by the compromise die by the compromise.

Gee. Anything else?

Oh sure. Paul Curley, the Tory national campaign chairman who was in charge of catering on the Titanic, is going around saying that Coates is just fronting for Bill Davis.

Yeah? Is Bill Davis going somewhere?

Hadn't you heard? He's finally winding up his charisma in a tight little ball and, not having much regard for Clark, has set his eyes on Ottawa.

Why would that be?

Possibly because his party's private polling shows him behind and with a fair chance to lose to Ontario Liberal leader Dr. Stuart Smith if he dared risk his minority government this year.

Well, I guess that means the Ontario Tories are finished.

Never. The Big Blue Machine has one never-failing tradition: always bring in the new guy before the old guy is completely finished.

But who could replace Premier Davis?

Who's that? Darcy McKeough?

Nope. Too right-wing. It's Julian Porter, QC, chairman Toronto Transit Commission, tall, handsome, eloquent, 45-ish, son of former Ontario chief justice Dana Porter, former aide to Robert Stanfield, impeccable Tory credentials.

Why would they bring in a guy like that out of the blue and confront the public?

Look, dummy, you don't understand modern politics. You gotta have momentum. The Big Mo. Thanks to TV, the public grows bored of political faces very quickly. Too long in the spotlight makes your brain turn soft. The whole idea, just before an election, is to zap in a new, interesting face to pique the interest of the TV camera.

Does that mean the feds are in the same game?

Of course. Ed Broadbent may carry his sardonic cigars through one more election, but the NDP have this whiz kid in the wings, Bob Rae, who sings such satirical stuff at the piano that he's X-rated in Thunder Bay.

So I guess you mean the Liberals will be doing the same thing, oozing along with P.E. Reincarnation until just before the George Orwell Memorial Election in 1984 and then dazzling us with a newly-minted Grit?

Of course.

Liberal line-up

So that means a new face like Lloyd Axworthy or Don Johnston will be the one?

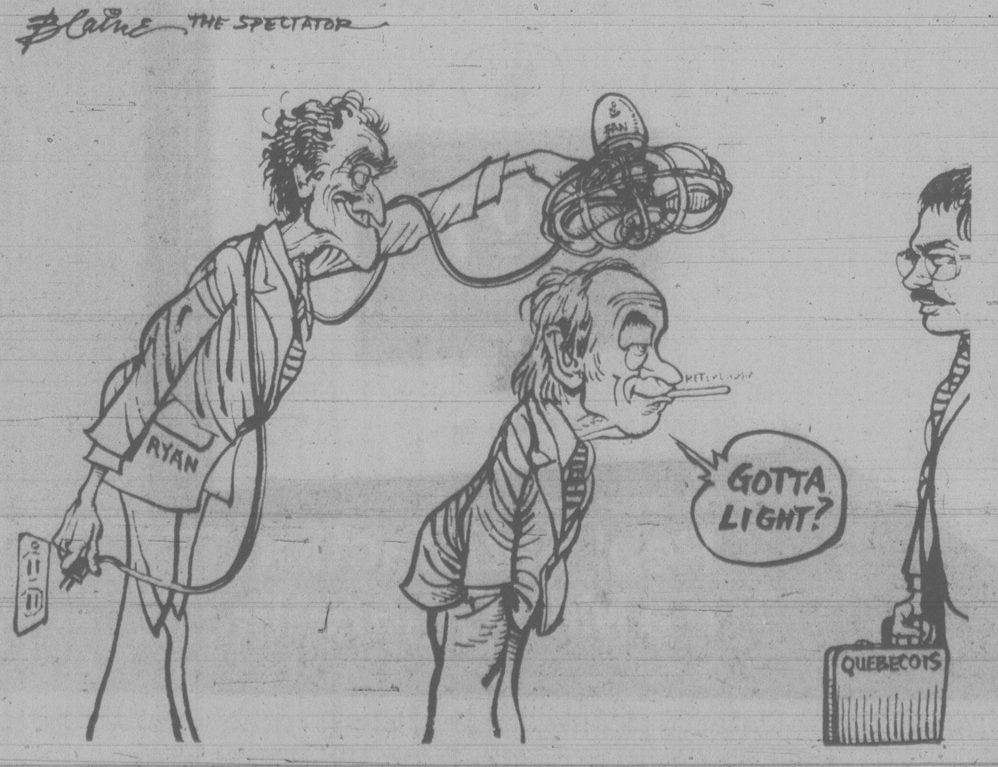
Not a chance. The Liberals always go outside for their pretty new face.

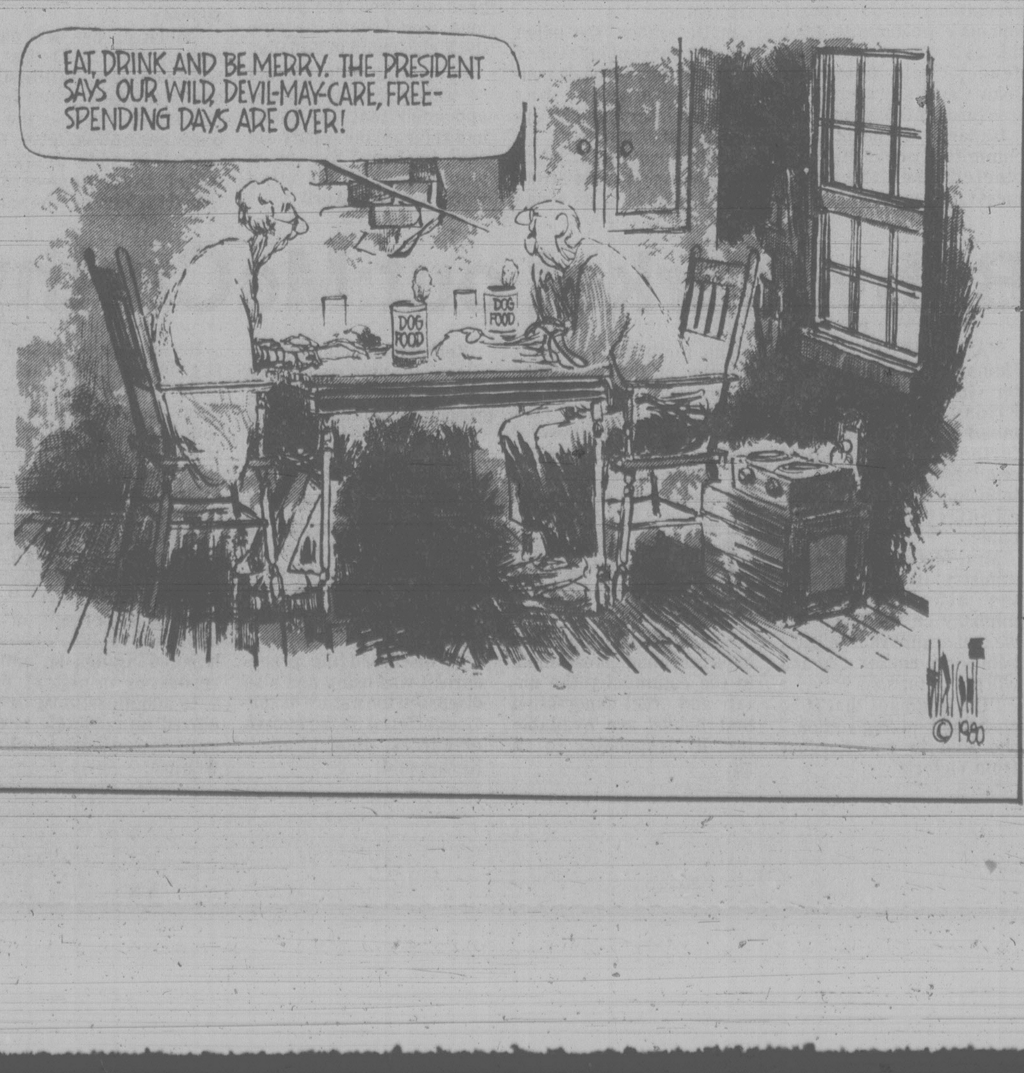
Quick! I can't stand the suspense.

Easy. In a couple of years, Mark MacGuigan will be eased onward with a major ambassadorial post. His Windsor seat will be filled by Paul Martin Jr., president Canada Steamship Lines, largest Canadian-flag fleet on Great Lakes, 42-ish, superb business establishment connections and son of course of his father, most astute ward politican of his era.

Wow, Dr. Fotheringham, I honestly don't know what I'd do without your advice.

It's nothing.





EAT, DRINK AND BE MERRY. THE PRESIDENT SAYS OUR WILD, DEVIL-MAY-CARE, FREE-SPENDING DAYS ARE OVER!

Pay for politicians

Disputes this week at Victoria city council and the Capital Regional Board have highlighted again the need for a new process for determining the pay of local politicians.

It just isn't fair to require the politicians to set their own salaries. No matter how rational their reasons for giving themselves a raise, the public — virtually none of whom have the opportunity to set their own salaries — is going to be deeply suspicious. It's a situation in which justice can never be seen to be done.

The situation at Victoria city was relatively simple this year, when the mayor and council did no more than award themselves the same percentage raise that their city employees had won — 7¼ per cent. There's a certain basic logic and fairness about that procedure.

Yet it too could theoretically lead to abuse by councillors or suspicion from the public: after all, if council members know that they will receive the same raise as their unionized employees, couldn't that be an incentive to them to allow a little higher settlement than they otherwise would? It's a bit like bargaining with yourself.

At the Capital Regional District, things were even more complicated. The 7¼ per cent for the cost-of-living raise was the same as Victoria's, but CRD directors decided that they would also give themselves an extra 15 per cent raise because of their "increased workload."

That's enough to make any penny-pinching taxpayer suspicious. Who decided that the workload had been increased or that the increase was worth 15 per cent? Did anyone consider the question of whether the workload had increased because there really were so many more tasks or just because the directors were being slow, unproductive or argumentative? The addition of transit services to the list of regional functions, for instance, is certainly a new task and a large one, but directors could have dealt with it much more quickly if they hadn't allowed the debate to degenerate into parochial squabbling on numerous occasions.

No politician — no human being, for that matter — can reasonably be expected to make that kind of judgment about his own performance objectively.

Some type of formula needs to be worked out — a formula that takes into consideration the size of individual municipalities, regional districts and school districts, (based perhaps on some combination of population, geographic size, and assessment base), the functions the local government body performs (this applies especially to regional districts, which may undertake on an optional basis a wide variety of functions), and inflation. It is to be hoped that Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's guidelines for municipal salaries provide this type of formula when they are made public within the next few weeks.

In the longer run, however, the government should perhaps be looking at some innovative alternatives to try to help persons wanting to run for office without overburdening the taxpayer.

For example, Victoria Ald. Bob Wright is certainly correct in saying that the Greater Victoria area doesn't need 60 full-time municipal politicians at the moment. If each elected person chose to do nothing else, it would surely be a case of work being invented to fill the time available for its completion.

On the other hand, it might well be argued that the region could do with more than two municipal politicians paid to work on the job full time (the mayors of Saanich and Victoria). Is there any reason why the Municipal Act couldn't be amended to allow a council to determine that a certain number of its members should be full-time and paid accordingly while the rest would be part-time? Individuals could then run for either the full-time or part-time positions as they chose.

It also remains true that, despite slightly increased salaries, it is most difficult for the average wage-earner to run, especially for Victoria council or the regional board. Both hold many meetings in ordinary day-time working hours, and employers often look askance on their employees departing for a half-day once or twice a week to attend to civic business. It is one reason why a disproportionately high number of civic politicians are self-employed businessmen or professionals. A few are in the sort of jobs where flexible hours are possible.

This is a difficult problem to solve, because while increasing the council salaries will allow workers to take time off without pay, it won't end the disruption that often worries the employers.

Like the other problems with politicians' pay, however, it is one that needs to be considered seriously, if we are going to ensure that our elected representatives can be truly representative of our community.

Ellen Goodman

Blaming the victims

BOSTON — It's not that I have anything against psychiatry. Some of my best friends have been shrunk as if their heads were 100 per cent cotton. When it was over, they fit better.

But I worry about those members of the mental "help" professions who take every public problem and wash it into a private one. I worry, too, about the lay people who spin-dry each social illness until it looks like an emotional disease. I worry about the rest of us who wring every fear into a phobia.

It has become, if you will excuse the expression, a social disease.

At Three Mile Island, for example, we have people busily turning a nuclear accident into a neurotic one. It's a year now since the incident at the Pennsylvania plant and we still have no scientific solution to the technical problems. What we do have is a $375,000 grant from the federal government to study chronic stress.

I have no objection to turning the area into a psychiatric lab. It's better than being a radioactive lab. But I have the creepy feeling that by the second anniversary of Three Mile Island, we'll be experts in "living with nuclear plant stress" and rank amateurs in getting rid of the source.

The same thing has happened with the DC-10. Since last winter, I have entered these planes only against my better judgment and my instructions to the travel agent.

When I talked about this fear with a flight attendant on a 727, she agreed. But then she told me that those attendants who refuse to work on the plane are being offered, you guessed it, psychiatric help. The airline wants to ground the fear, you see, instead of the engine. Never mind that there may be more to fear than fear itself.

The same thing happened to a woman who was being sexually harassed by the men at her plant. When she complained to her boss, he referred her to a psychiatrist.

I understand that in the world there are people who are nuts. But I am also sure that the world can make people nuts. The "helping professions" are sometimes less concerned with the causes than the treatment. But we all have a tendency lately to focus more on the individual than the environment.

Take inflation (please!) as an example. We are now having a national anxiety attack about money. We have people sinking into debt or terrified about the future of their fixed income. I am sure that they will all be taking tranquillizers, and reading articles on anxiety. Someone will surely come up with a perfectly reasonable program for dealing with inflation-phobia: jogging and brown rice.

Inflation — like DC-10s, and Three Mile Islands, and Cold Wars — is bad for your mental health. But there is a difference between dealing with these problems as social diseases or as psychological ones. It's the difference between giving the unemployed jobs or giving them leaflets on how to explain to their children why they aren't getting birthday presents.

The whole psychiatric, psychobabble approach to major social problems makes me cringe. It puts the responsibility on the person who often is least powerful. It smacks of blaming the victim.

It's not that mental problems aren't real. They are. But there are a host of anxieties for which the best treatment is rubbing dollar bills all over your body.

There are other problems which need more action and less analysis. I know a couple who spent six sessions at a marital counselling service discussing their arguments over housework. For the same price, they could have hired a cleaning service. But the cleaning service isn't covered by health insurance.

For the past 10 years, we have had a tendency to look at a lot of our problems as personal, private, psychological when they may be environmental, social, public.

We all have a tendency to shrink our problems to manageable size by placing them inside our heads. We learn to cope with the world instead of trying to change it.

I sometimes suspect that mental health in America is like mental health in Russia. In the USSR you get labelled crazy, maladjusted or whatever, if you disagree with the government. In the United States, you can get a psychiatric referral if you freak out over the chemicals in your backyard, or the Agent Orange in your past, or the Not-So-Jolly Green Giant in your wallet.

Psychiatry is a growth industry in the U.S. Like any expanding business, it starts creeping into new areas. We seem to launder more and more anxieties into syndromes. The only thing we should be shrinking is the market.

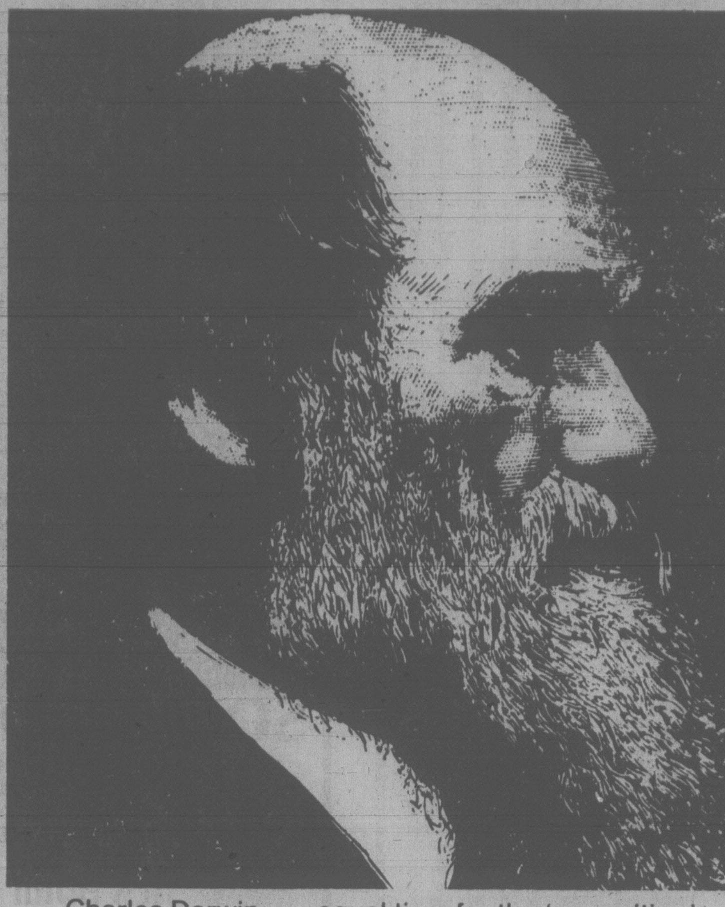
Creation: Old doctrine still taught in Alberta

By VAL SEARS
Toronto Star



Charles Darwin . . . equal time for the 'opposition'

EDMONTON — Up in northwest Alberta there's a county called East Smokey where the biology teachers in public schools tell the kids that life may have arisen out of primeval ooze millions of years ago.

On the other hand, the teachers say, man may just as well have been planted on earth, fully formed, by the hand of God, less than 20,000 years ago.

Both theories — one called evolution, the other creation — are given equal weight. And if the Alberta creationists get their way, they will persuade the provincial minister of education next month that the creation alternative ought to be taught in every school in Alberta.

This fundamentalist doctrine of the origin of man, which most educated people thought was killed by Charles Darwin and buried at the Scopes trial in Tennessee, is alive and well in Alberta.

"No biology text would be acceptable in this province that spoke of evolution as a fact," says Dr. George Bevan, director of curriculum for Alberta schools. "Evolution is theory."

He adds: "I think perhaps this policy (of alternative teaching of biology) is unique to Alberta. We have gone further than other provinces to be fair."

In the face of growing interest in "scientific creationism" — more than 3,000 people overflowed the Jubilee Auditorium here in January to hear creation speakers — the department of education issued a policy "regarding the treatment of the theory of evolution in school science programs."

On controversial issues in general, schools must "represent alternative points of view." On creation in particular, schools are directed to "confine their choice to those learning resources in which the science subject matter is deemed to be satisfactory in terms of the definition of science."

That means, the policy document goes on, that it must deal with "a body of observable and reproducible facts concerning material phenomena, systematically arranged and showing the operation of general laws and theories."

The man who is prepared to take on the department — arguing that creation theory fits that policy — is a 62-year-old former head of the Alberta Teachers' Association, who simply, firmly and amiably believes that God made the earth and everything on it.

Ivan Stonehocker of Lacombe, Alberta, is an inheritor of a deep fundamentalist tradition in this province.

"Alberta has an exceptional history of religious non-conformity," says Toronto theologian William Mann, "a history without parallel among provinces of Canada."

Rural ideology

Stonehocker's brand of fundamentalism — he's a member of the Evangelical Free Church — "constituted a reaction against the forces of urbanism, cultural maturity and centralization," says Mann, "and a defence of past tradition and mores" (in the postwar years).

"In a period of rapid social change, fundamentalism attempted to freeze certain traditional religious values and meanings within a thoroughly rural ideology and hence defend the province's slowly retreating rural society."

It earlier produced such curious religious kinks in Alberta as William Aberhart's Social Credit movement, associated with the Prophetic Bible Institute, the Ravenites, the Cooneyites, the United Truth Movement, the Sun Movement and the Great I Am.

Even today in a province full of charging Cadillacs, oozing oil dollars and expensive restaurants, served by Chinese dressed as Beefeaters, fundamentalism has a hold that drew 15,000 people last year to creationist lectures.

Ivan Stonehocker was a World War II bomber-navigator, a graduate of the University of Alberta in science and a schoolteacher for nearly 30 years.

In most of that time, he never really believed that the classic theory of evolution — that life was formed by chemical action millions of years ago, and that order in the universe was a matter of chance — really held up.

In 1975, following an American lead, he formed the Creation Science Association of Alberta. Similar groups have been formed in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Ontario.

Armed with literature from creationist authors in the U.S. with such titles as From God to You by Way of the Zoo and Monkeys Will Never Talk, Stonehocker set out to stump the province.

"I'm a religious man," says Stonehocker, a spare, soft-spoken and amusing grandfather. "But I don't accept the Bible as scientific text in my work. I try to point out, scientifically, there are simply too many holes in evolution theory for an alternative not to be considered.

"For the universe to be the work of a Designer makes more sense."

Creationist theory as laid out in a series of mimeographed school texts, which they hope to convince the minister of education to put in schools next month, holds that God made the earth and man no earlier than 20,000 years ago.

For their "young earth" theory they cite, among other things, the argument that if the earth was billions of years old it should be covered with 50 feet of meteor dust and it isn't.

"Neither is the moon, which isn't subject to erosion or winds," says Stonehocker, gleefully calling the astronauts to his aid. "The spacemen even had trouble digging their flag in the hard ground."

They insist the earth's magnetic field is decaying at a rate that places its age at 10,000 years. They argue the Carbon-14 dating "clock" was started at the time of God's great flood and that all the fossils were set in sedimentary rock at that time.

Creationists say man must have been created fully formed because no one has ever found a link between man and apes. They say there is no genetic similarity between man and other organisms.

Dinosaurs drowned

Dinosaurs were probably all drowned in the flood ("very deep water could change the land. Then dinosaurs could not live as planned," says a rhyming textbook for children).

The fact that space probes have found no life on Mars persuades creationists that life on earth is unique in the universe.

"Life is here on earth because it was created here by a master Designer. The earth was made to be lived on. It was placed a proper distance from the sun, supplied with water and vegetation, established with a proper atmosphere and given livable temperatures.

"Then life in all its simple and complex forms was created and placed on the mature and functioning earth," argues a creationist schoolbook.

"All we ask is a balance, not a bias, in scientific teaching," Stonehocker says.

Says Alberta curriculum director Bevan: "It's all a residue, a legacy of the province's early fundamentalism.

"We're not a bunch of rednecks, you know."

Golden Bough

Since you began the UVic Forum series, I have followed it with a certain amount of interest, partly because the contributors occasionally have something worthwhile to say, but chiefly because I was puzzled at the motivation for such an exclusive "forum". Ideally, a forum is supposed to be a place for public debate. By limiting your forum to UVic professors, you are implicitly propagating a kind of intellectual snobbery: you are saying, in effect, that since these people are accredited to teach in university, they must have access to truths that are denied to others. This places the rest of us in the position of a church congregation: we may listen and be saved from our errors, but we may not enter a rebuttal.

Truth is not the exclusive property of university professors. Some of my best friends are professors; I do not hold that against them, but I have detected in them the same failings of prejudice, passion and human frailty that the rest of us are subject to.

Facts, however, are something else again. And Robert Reid's article on Darwin in the UVic Forum of March 15 is a fine example of how facts can be distorted to fit a preconceived thesis: the so-called "mythification" of Darwin.

I will be forced to ignore most of the obvious nonsense (like the passage which seems to lump the Galapagian animals and Thomas Huxley together as Darwin's "faithful mythic beast") and confine myself to a passage which seems to imply a mean-spiritedness in Darwin which I do not believe his worst enemies ever accused him of: ". . . he (Darwin) viewed himself as the sole author of evolution theory." As Mr. Reid must know, this is so far from accurate that in 1858 (when Darwin was halfway through the monumental task of writing The Origin of Species) he offered to step aside in favor of Alfred Russel Wallace, who had sent him a paper outlining Darwin's own ideas, but based on far fewer data.

That is only a sample of the lengths to which Mr. Reid's "mythification" thesis drives him. The most charitable construction I can put on this essay is that he is suffering from an overdose of The Golden Bough. — Howard M. Harris, 403-928 Southgate Street.

High and dry

My husband and I are both handicapped and are not able to perform the normal exercise routine which other folks use to keep in shape and in general good health. Our doctor advised that we go to one of the three public pools and make use of the regular swimming pool as well as the swirl pool.

I am scared stiff of water and have no knowledge of swimming and because of his handicap my husband is unable to swim either.

I knew I would have to go to a facility which had a railing just below the water surface, to which I could cling and in this manner do all sorts of weird and wonderful things. There followed a series of phone calls which in the end left me exactly where I started. High and dry. Not one pool, aside from the Gorge Hospital therapy pool, which for obvious reasons is not open to public use, had any such accommodating railing.

To install this railing wouldn't be a bad idea. The most likely place to position it would be wrapped about the corner nearest the steps into the pool. The railing could be removable when the pool is in daily use, but it could be replaced in the permanent mounting at times designated for use by the people who would use the convenience.

Special hours could be incorporated two or three nights a week into the regular evening swim time when youngsters are not about. This would avoid embarrassment and possible unfortunate accidents. We hope someone connected with the recreation facilities gives this real thought because they would be doing a great favor to a lot of people. — Mrs. A. Hodgson, 33-880 Vernon Avenue.

More reviews

Re: book reviews: It has been a matter of regret that, latterly, your reviews have been fewer than in the past. It adds to the cultural life of the city to have good reviews as a weekly feature. A couple isn't enough!

Stephen Hume's enthusiastic write-up (March 15) regarding the work of Jeni Couzyn is stimulating. As it causes me to want to buy one of the volumes referred to, I miss the usual bare bones conclusion of any solid review: publisher, price and date of publication (as well as author and title).

He mentions a current Canadian reprint of Monkey's Wedding (earlier British publisher not stated). Then he refers to House of Changes — "her most recent book" (one assumes, possibly incorrectly, still a British publisher?). Most confusing!

More reviews, please . . . and do have reviewers include the usual summary detail. — Clare McAllister, 302-118 Croft Street.

Back pages

The Weekend Times of March 22 carried an article about the Klu (sic) Klux Klan. The article covered fully a third of Page One with an additional 10 column inches on page 16.

I question your editorial judgement in giving so much prominence to such a story. As the story says, there are only four or five people on the active list in Victoria. Are the rest of us to be corrupted by this tiny group? Is the anti-racist cause well served by drawing attention to their opinions? Are their feelings of any interest to more than a handful of your readers? I think not. If in fact the story was worth printing at all it should have been confined to a squib on a back page.

A back page would also have been a more appropriate place to print a misspelling of the name of this odious organization. — J. I. Manore, 4404 Tremblay Drive.

Stock listing rules tightened on VSE

VANCOUVER (CP) — New rules aimed at improving the quality of stocks listed on the Vancouver Curb Exchange have been published by the exchange and the superintendent of brokers.

An application for listing must be accompanied by a fee of $2,000 and the written consent of the superintendent. The company must have completed a primary distribution of 250,000 shares and have at least 150 shareholders of record, exclusive of vendors, promoters, directors and other insiders.

The management of a company applying for listing must satisfy the exchange that it has expertise in its prime area of endeavor.

The company must have enough working capital to carry out its planned program of exploration, and not less than $15,000 in addition to funds allocated for the work company.

Any proposed change in management must be approved by the exchange.

A new stretch for Challenger

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadair has decided to go ahead with a stretched version of its Challenger business jet, a company spokesman said.

More than 40 orders have been placed for the Challenger E model, which sells for $8.25 million (U.S.), and the board of directors of the federally-owned company decided to go ahead with the project. The aircraft, to be ready by 1983, will be powered by the General Electric CF-34 turbofan engine.

Canadair has received 126 orders for the regular Challenger, mostly from customers in the United States, and the first deliveries will be made by early autumn. Ground test difficulties last year caused delays, but most flight tests have been completed and the aircraft is in the final stages of government approval.

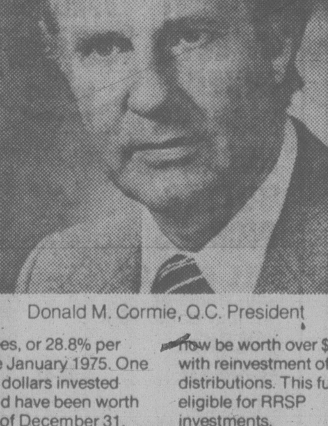
Stock Market Signals Bullish Times ahead.

Biggest Bull Market in History Could Occur in Next Five Years.



Donald M. Cormie, Q.C. President

That is the opinion of Don Cormie, President of the $250-million Edmonton-based Principal Group. He has 25 years of experience and research to back him up.

Cormie has observed that stock prices and economic trends occur in recurring cycles. "Compared to real estate prices, North American stocks have not been as cheap, since 1921," says Cormie. "The eight year period following 1921 was the beginning of the last great bull market. During that time the Dow Jones Average went from 64 to 385."

Cormie believes today's stock prices could offer the same buying opportunity as in 1921. At that time the majority of investors were frantically buying real estate and gold and ignoring the stock market — except the few astute investors who saw the bargain basement prices of the stock market.

"The key to successful investing is to buy the bargains. Today, as in 1921, the majority of investors are still ignoring bargain basement prices in the stock markets. In fact stocks are still valued at historically low prices."

This straight forward philosophy is not idle speculation on Cormie's part. Principal Group's Investment Department maintains charts, graphs and computerized records that date back to the 1700's. Based on this data, Principal Group has become one of the rising stars among economic research and investment firms in Canada.

Principal Venture Fund Ltd. has increased over 3½ times after all fees, or 28.8% per year since January 1975. One thousand dollars invested then would have been worth $3,546 as of December 31, 1979. This fund emphasizes agressive capital appreciation.

Principal Growth Fund has increased 168.4% after all fees in the last five years. One thousand dollars invested on December 31, 1974 would now be worth over $2684. with reinvestment of all distributions. This fund is eligible for RRSP investments.

Collective Mutual Fund Ltd., which stresses international blue chip companies, has increased 141.1% after all fees since January 1, 1975. That's a compound annual rate of return of 19.2%.

None of these returns are guaranteed, nor is there 100% certainty that the next bull cycle will be like the rest. But Principal has committed itself to a growth strategy that has been successful.

Why should you as an investor buy Principal's investment funds? When you do, you immediately share in the 25 years of research and investment expertise the company has developed. You buy the full-time, professional management of managers who know a bargain when they see one. You immediately buy the safety represented by the diversification of over 30 stocks each fund owns. You buy the accounting and tax reporting forms that the company provides. You make an investment with liquidity. And, your shares in the fund may be presented for redemption on any business day at their net asset value. Net asset value is reported daily in the major Canadian newspapers.

Can you afford to miss what could be the investment buying opportunity of this coming decade? For as little an investment of $600.00 or more you can buy and own the investment expertise of real professionals.

Whether you're a small or large investor phone us now for further information to get the whole story on why we think stocks are a bargain.

'We dig holes for money, that's all'

By JANE O'HARA
FP News Service

LONDON — The men who mine for black gold in the Noth Sea are called roughnecks, although some would say they are lunatics.

There are 10,000 of them. They are drawn to the rigs from all over the world and have been since 1970 when drilling the seabeds became a billion-dollar business.

Some are drifters. Some are macho adverturers looking for a place to stretch their egos and prove that heroism is not dead in a dying century. But for the most part they are industrial mercenaries. Men brave the fierce winds and the unrelenting seas of the oil rigs for one reason and one reason only — money.

Don't talk to them about the thrill of the high seas, or the terror of temperatures that can turn a man to stone. They find no glamor in wearing the heavy oil-skin coats and helmets or in watching a buddy have his arm torn from its socket by a drilling bit.

"We dig holes for money," is the laconic response from one worker. "That's all there is to it."

And no one can argue with the money. A skilled worker makes close to $60,000 a year, an average laborer makes almost $35,000. For peasants who have come from France, Canadians who have come to take risks, for Norwegian fishermen and Scottish tradesmen, the money is all too tempting.

For many British laborers from towns where industry is shutting down and jobs are drying up it is nothing if not an necessity.

For them it buys bigger cars and bigger houses for wives and families and keeps them off the dole. For others, the drifters, the "nutters," it buys women and booze and makes the dice roll at gambling halls in Scotland's new oil towns.

But if the pay is high, so too are the stakes. Danger is never far away. The men work 12-hour days two weeks at a stretch (two weeks off each month) on their wind-swept platforms. Before Thursday's disaster when the Alexander Kielland capsized, 100 men had lost their lives in the North Sea. Thousands more have been injured. It can happen any number of ways. Men have been swept overboard by high winds, or pitched over from the force of a steel hawser which has snapped under the shifting strains of the North Sea currents. It is a mark of the men's toughness that the loss of a few fingers is not considered a serious complaint.

And then there is the mental stress. North Sea and its oil treasures have driven some men crazy. It has also accounted for serious alcoholic problems and the long separations have destroyed many a marriage. Of course, that same oil, 18 to 33 billion gallons, has kept the British economy afloat at a time when the rest of its industry is taking the deep six.

There are trade-offs in everything.

The highest death rate of the North Sea workers is among the divers, many of whom have been Canadians. They keep a 24-hour maintenance watch on the seabed pipeline and drill, making their rounds in semi-submersible ships in almost total darkness and near freezing temperatures.

The North Sea offers men money, but it arguably also offers them the world's worst working conditions. When the Alexander Kielland went under, waves were 30 feet high and the wind was at gale force 10.

"We design all North Sea rigs for 100-year storm conditions," said Phil Irwin, an American production manager of Mobil North Sea. "Once every 100 years you expect 100-knot winds and 100-foot seas, and this winter when the winds have been gusting it has felt like that."

North Sea rigs are known as floating hotels, and in some ways they live up to this billing. They have saunas, games rooms, cinemas and gymnasiums. There are no bars, for drinking is not allowed, although it is rumored that rum-running does go on. Rig restaurants, however, are open 24 hours a day.

It will be sometime before the details of the disaster are fully known. It is interesting however that the Alexander Kielland was designed with watertight compartments. This means that even if several of them were broken and flooded, the vessel would supposedly stay afloat.

Of course the same thing was said of the Titanic.

Cambodia: only half the people survived

By BRENDA DALGLISH

How does one describe to Canadians — whose idea of deprivation is having to serve hamburger twice in a row — the condition of the Cambodian people?

It's a problem William Newell, executive director of World Vision of Canada, has faced in his travels across Canada trying to raise $2 million for medical and orphan programs in Cambodia.

Cambodians for the last four years have worked 16 to 18 hours a day, living on a diet of gruel and whatever could be scrounged off the land, while their government tried to destroy every remnant of civilized society in an effort to take Cambodia back 800 years.

They have seen relatives and friends murdered as then prime minister Pol Pot tried to eliminate everybody who objected to his scheme to recreate 13th century Cambodian society.

Newell, one of only three Canadians allowed into the country in recent years, has just returned from Cambodia and has been telling Canadians how the country is recovering from the horror that only half its people survived.

The country had a population of 8.5 million in 1975 when Pol Pot took command. By the time of his overthrow after Cambodia was invaded by Vietnamese forces in January, 1979, only four million remained, said Newell.

Pol Pot tried to take the country back to its "golden age" in the 1300s. To do this he planned to exterminate anyone with education of more than Grade 5 level and to rid the country of all modern goods.

With Pol Pot ousted and a new communist government in power, World Vision is one of a few groups which will be allowed to help rebuild the shattered society, Newell said.

World Vision, is a non-denominational organization, whose purpose is to provide an instrument through which Christians can provide world-wide assistance to those in need.

In Cambodia, World Vision has been given permission to begin four programs: re-establish a pediatric hospital it built in 1975 but which was taken over by Pol Pot, rebuild a faculty of medicine, establish a hostel and a polytechnical institute for those between 15 and 21 who were orphaned, and build 10 smaller orphanages for young children without parents.

To do this it will be seeking funds from business, public and government sources.

Newell, when he was in Victoria, asked Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt for $100,000, suggesting a matching grant program where the public come up with the same amount.

Newell also will meet External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan in Ottawa to outline the situation in Cambodia and to ask for additional funding.

"Generally World Vision doesn't involve itself at all in the political workings of the countries we deal with," he said, "but in this case I think it's extremely important that we speak out."

Newell said he will ask MacGuigan to withdraw Canada's diplomatic recognition of the Pol Pot regime which is still fighting in some remote areas of the country.

He said he'll also ask that Canada officially recognize the new government and open a consulate in the country.

"World Vision has always been very careful about getting politically involved. It's one reason we've been successful, but in this instance, because there's such ignorance about what's happening there, we must."

Newell accused the United Nations of knowing about the conditions in Cambodia since 1977 without taking action.

The curtain began to drop on Cambodia in 1970 when the country's leader Prince Sihanouk was deposed by Lon Nol in a military overthrow. In 1975 after several years of deteriorating conditions he was replaced by Pol Pot, who now is generally thought to have been a madman, Newell said.

After Pol Pot's ouster, he was succeeded by another faction of the communist Khmer Rouge.

Since then Canada has provided about $15 million in aid through the United Nations, he said, but claims that non-governmental agencies are better distributors of aid.

He suggested that money going through levels of government bureaucracy, especially at the receiving end, leaves too much opportunity for graft. A non-governmental agency like World Vision provides less opportunity for that.

"We ask for money to do specific projects and those projects, when they're complete, will be tangible evidence that the money has gone for the purpose intended."

Two more months of fast time urged

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — If governments are serious about energy conservation they should start saving daylight, says the chairman of Ontario's royal commission on electric power planning that suggested the change in its report.

Arthur Porter said this week that daylight time should be extended to eight months from the current six.

Porter said daylight time should start the first weekend of March and run to the end of October. It now goes from the last weekend of April to the last weekend of October.

The Pauls: Since 1957 football their passion

When Victoria West defeated Cosmopolitan Royals in a Jackson Cup soccer match two weeks ago, there was a little more to the game than the score. For it brought up the point — incidental to the result perhaps, but important to the clubs and persons involved — that two brothers, who have done so much for the game since arriving in the city 23 years ago, were matched against one another.

One of the first things George and Henry Paul did on arriving from Scotland in 1957 was to join the old Esquimalt Football Club. Since then their weekends have belonged to football.

George went on to distinguish himself as a player with Victoria United and O'Keefes in the old Coast League in the 60s. He joined Vic West for the 1969-70 season and was one of those instrumental in building the Wests into the club that later won its first national championship. For the last two years he has been coach of the Cosmos, a young club that is building for the future.

Henry, on the other hand, was never the player, and took the other tack. He was always there when needed — to work in an executive capacity, to help with the coaching, to run the lines, or whatever, and always for the good of the sport. He remained with Esquimalt for a number of years, then joined Vic West. He was elected president of that club in 1978, a season which was culminated last fall with Wests winning the national amateur title for a second time.

Henry's Wests won that Jackson Cup game, as it figured, and may be on top for now in that age old battle of brotherly love. But George isn't far behind and perhaps not for long either. For just last week his young Cosmos Royals served notice for the future by winning a key match to remain in the first division. From all football fans, it's nice to have had them aboard.

And now to lacrosse . . . and, if Canada West or, for that matter, Canada East, figures to have things more or less their own way in the Nations Cup box lacrosse tournament scheduled for Vancouver and Victoria this summer, they should think again. The U.S. team will be virtually an all-star aggregation and will probably feature many of the players who represented the U.S. in last year's world field lacrosse tournament in England. The U.S. players have all the skills Canadians do, with the possible exception of stick-handling, which is a vital commodity in the confined area that box lacrosse is played in. But that may be Canada's only edge as it is humbly suggested that the U.S. players are pointing for this one. They figure to have a score to settle, because it definitely was an upset when they got dumped by Canada in last year's world final.

And further, Dave Evans, the veteran all-star goalkeeper from Vancouver Burrards who recently was on loan to the Australian Lacrosse Council, says the Australians could also cause a few shock waves.

Evans was pleasantly amazed at what he saw. "It was an experience I will never forget," he said. "It was also an eye-opener. I couldn't believe the progress the Australians have made in lacrosse, especially the box game. Their enthusiasm is unbelievable and I would rate them a very strong contender for the title in July. They will surprise a lot of people."

Evans also helped coach the Perth women's team which won the national title. "I think they could teach our girls a thing or two," he said.

And, albeit a minor way, another Victorian has made a name for himself. Terry Olson recently tied a school record at Western Michigan University with 35 assists for that school's hockey team. Olson finished with 22 goals and 57 points in 36 games, second to linemate Ross Fitzpatrick of Penticton who had 59. And a following note on the career of Wayne Isbister, leading trainer at Ex Park last year, is that Isbister's total of 65 winners was fourth in the national rankings and only two shy of second place. His money total (his horses won purses of more than $193,000) was down, obviously, because Ex Park and Sandown aren't Greenwood and Woodbine. But that was last year. This season, Isbister may have come up with a prize catch. When the 114-day season opens at Ex Park, April 14, he will have the highly-regarded Incorporator in his stable. Now a five-year old, Incorporator won his first three starts as a two-year old in Winnipeg before being shipped to New York where he developed bone chips. He was operated on twice, didn't regain his form until last year, and was claimed at Santa Anita this spring by the Billian brothers, Gary, Bob and Jerry, for $40,000. Later he won a $30,000 allowance And methinks he can run some

IOC offering aid to needy

MOSCOW (AP) — The director of the International Olympic Committee said Friday that the IOC will give financial aid to needy teams attending the Moscow Olympics. She left open the prospect that if a national committee boycotts the Games, its athletes could be registered individually.

Monique Berlioux spoke following a two-day meeting of the IOC press commission, which reviewed a series of measures to facilitate media coverage of the Games.

They include an extension until June 1 of the deadline for press accreditation, and assurances that reporters whose governments boycott the Olympics can cover the Games.

Berlioux gave no details of the planned financial aid, except to say the IOC had decided to grant it. Much of the aid presumably would go to poor countries, but some Olympic federations in Western countries face possible shutoffs of government funds if they fail to observe boycott calls.

Asked if athletes from boycotting countries might be eligible for individual registration, Berlioux told a news conference: "For the moment, individual registration is not foreseen." She told reporters later that such registration, in her view, was not barred by the Olympic charter and that she intentionally had left the possibility open.

She said Soviet organizers had reported that 105 countries had given written notification that they intended to come to the Games. But Vladimir I. Popov, first deputy chairman of the Soviet Organizing Committee, told reporters later that these were not necessarily official nor written responses.

Soviet sources said about 40 countries so far have notified Moscow officially they are coming.

Disappointment for skaters

By MAX LOW

Disappointment rather than dazzling performances marked the opening of the North American Speedskating Championships Friday night in Memorial Arena.

Fresh from their triumphs in the World Indoor Championships in Milan, Italy, last weekend, the eight-member Canadian national team flew in this week anticipating the same tough competition from virtually the same opposing skaters. That isn't going to happen.

Not only did the talented Japanese and Australian teams decide to fly straight home instead of calling in here for the North American meet on their way, but also the whole American team — traditionally in full force at this meet — stayed away!

There are a handful of lesser-known Americans among the 100 or so skaters taking part but the meet has been reduced to one even smaller than the Canadian championships and there seems little doubt that the Canadian team skaters — Gaetan Boucher was first in the world in Milan, Louis Grenier was second, Louis Baril was fourth and Kathy Turnbull was third among the women — will sweep the titles here without even being pushed.

Kathy, an attractive 20-year-old from Regina, was rather dejected as she sat sharpening her skates before her first heat Friday. With only six senior women skaters entered and five of those (the first two in each of two heats and the fastest of the third-place getters) going into the final, most of the drama and excitement of a championship was missing.

"Last year in Los Angeles this was a much bigger meet and we had thought it would be like that," she explained. "In the women's events last year there were 14 or 15 skaters so we had to have three heats and then semi-finals before the finals."

As it is for all the skaters, this is the last meet of the season for Kathy, who hopes to go back to studying physiotherapy and plans "more school than skating" next year. She was disappointed the meet here won't provide better opposition and a more exciting end to the season and felt the ice surface, which she said is quite a bit smaller that it was in Los Angeles, led to a boycott by some skaters.

"It just doesn't seem like a North American championship," she said wistfully, glancing around at the almost-empty arena.

But Canada's national team coach Jack Walters of Ottawa believed it was more a question of timing and of the Americans' poor performance in Milan.

"Last year, this event came before the Worlds and the teams went to Los Angeles on their way," he explained. "That made it an important meet but now, coming after they've competed in the worlds, it's a bit of an anti-climax.

"Usually there are 125 or more American skaters at the North American meet but this time there are only around 15 or 16 here! Sure, it's disappointing but the Americans were disappointed themselves with their efforts in Milan and down in Los Angeles last year, Canadians won about 70 per cent of everything, anyway."

Boucher, Grenier and the Baril brothers, all from Quebec, and Kathy Turnbull skated Friday night but the pressure wasn't on anyone really as the events were all heats in preparation for finals today and Sunday when the meet ends.

But Louis Baril, who comes from Quebec City, did edge Ste. Foy's Louis Grenier in his 1,000 metres heat in 1 minute, 47.7 seconds to crack Boucher's Canadian record of 1:48.00. Grenier tied the old record and Bill Johnson of Ottawa was third in 1:48.9.

Boucher had little trouble in winning the other heat with Benoit Baril second and David Shields of Victoria third.

David, son of meet co-ordinator Jim Shields, was beaten out for the fifth final qualifying spot by Johnson who was three seconds faster in placing third in his heat. And he quipped to Shields afterward:

"All you had to do to get in Dave was break the Canadian record!"

The only other Canadian record to go Friday night was in the 1,000 metres for intermediate men where Michel Desisle of Quebec City had a time of 1:50.8 to better the old mark of 1:51.00.

Kathy Turnbull also had little difficulty in reaching the final of the senior women's 800 metres, finishing ahead of Susan Hellingwerf of New Brunswick in her heat. The other qualifiers were Norma Jean Taylor of Regina, Cathy Vogt of Winnipeg and Debbie Carlstron of Illinois.

It was a disappointing night for Victoria skaters as not only did David Shields fail to qualify but his sister Brenda considered a medal hopeful in the junior girls' division, was eliminated from the 1,500 metres. Her clubmate Leslie Davidson was disqualified from the other heat because of a false start.

Stoughton proves he can play in NHL

VANCOUVER (CP) — They came to see Gordie Howe and ended up applauding Blaine Stoughton.

A standing-room crowd of 16,362 jammed the Pacific Coliseum on Friday night to pay tribute to Gordie Howe, the 52-year-old grandfather who still plays a respectable right wing for Hartford Whalers in the National Hockey League.

It was Stoughton, however, who caught their attention as the 27-year-old right winger fired two goals, including one with less than six minutes left that gave Hartford a 4-4 tie with Vancouver Canucks.

Stoughton's marksmanship gave him 51 goals for the season, the first time a player on a first-year expansion team has registered 50 goals in the NHL.

"Stoughton is having one of those years where everything he shoots seems to be going into the net," said coach Harry Neale of the Canucks. "He was in the right position at the right time tonight and stole a point from us."

Stoughton scored just 18 goals last season while playing in the World Hockey Association with Indianapolis Racers and New England Whalers. He previously had been found wanting by Pittsburgh Penguins and Toronto Maple Leafs in the NHL.

"I came back to the league this year wanting to prove that I can play in the NHL," said Stoughton. "The coach gave me a lot of confidence early in the season by using me on the power play and for killing off penalties.

"It makes a big difference knowing that you're wanted."

The Canucks got goals from Kevin McCarthy, Thomas Gradin, Jerry Butler and Dave Williams as they gained just their second tie in the fifth game of an eight-game home stand.

"It's a big point for us this time of year because it makes it just that much harder for the teams behind us to catch us," said Whaler coach Don Blackburn "Vancouver is a desperate team and we're more than satisfied with the point tonight."

The Whalers are 14th in the over-all standings with 68 points in 76 games, just one point behind third-place Pittsburgh Penguins in the Norris Division. The Whalers are, however, winless in their last seven games, although they've tied four times.

The point didn't help the desperate Canucks much in their hunt for a playoff berth. Vancouver now is in 17th place with 62 points. Sixteen of 21 teams advance to the playoffs.

Neale said the tying goal was a "harmless two-on-two rush and Stoughton didn't get away the greatest shot in the world. But it was screened and (goaltender Glen) Hanlon didn't have a chance."

"I guess we've got to win the rest of our games, or that's it," he added. "We've put ourselves behind the eight-ball by not being able to win right here at home."

Vancouver has a record of 11-17-9 at home for 31 points, the worst home record in the NHL. The road mark of 12-30-7 also is good enough for 31 points. The Canucks play three of their last four games at home.

Amateur rider aboard winner of Aintree race

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — American amateur Charlie Fenwick rode Ben Nevis to victory in the 1980 Grand National steeplechase at Aintree race course today.

Ben Nevis, without a victory in his 12 previous races in England, started the horse race at 40 to 1.

Ben Nevis took the lead at the fearsome Beecher's Brook fence and held on to win convincingly over Rough and Tumble, The Pilgarlic and Royal Stuart.

Only four of the 30 starters finished the seven-kilometre race over 30 huge obstacles.

Winter Hawks back on beam

It took a while, but Portland Winter Hawks' offense finally got back in high gear in the Western Hockey League playoffs Friday.

And it is an attack, one of the most potent during the second half of the regular season, Victoria must contain when the Cougars make their first playoff start at Memorial Arena tonight.

The Hawks, upset 4-2 by Seattle Breakers last Wednesday in the opening game of the three-team, Western Division round-robin, continued to experience scoring frustration for a time Friday.

The time lasted only 15 minutes. Then Jim Benning, Jim Dobson and Florent Robidoux (twice) rammed in four goals in a span of three minutes and 52 seconds and Portland went on to defeat Seattle 7-3. Three of the goals came in a 90-second span in the first period.

Friday's result, before 2,803 fans in Seattle, left both Breakers and the Hawks with 1-1 records.

In other action Friday, Regina Pats grabbed a commanding 3-0 lead and Brandon Wheat Kings moved ahead, 2-1, in their best-of-seven Eastern Division playoffs.

The high-powered Pats defeated the Broncos 7-4 in Lethbridge while the Wheat Kings needed Dave Stewart's goal at the 44-second mark of sudden-death overtime to edge Calgary Wranglers 5-4.

Brandon's Dave Gillen sent the game into overtime when he rammed the puck past Calgary netminder Warren Skorodenski from a wild goalmouth scramble with 39 seconds remaining in the third period. That ruined a strong comeback for the Wranglers who had scored three consecutive third-period goals to take a 4-3 lead.

Cougars go into tonight's game, which starts at 8:30, with one question mark. Winger Bob Smith continues to be troubled by a sore shoulder and is a doubtful starter.

If he is unable to play, Victoria coach Jack Shupe plans to use Bud McCarthy as Smith's replacement on a line with Mark Morrison and Torrie Robertson.

'Canadian mentality' annoys national basketball coach

Times News Services

Coach Jack Donohue says he is steaming about spectators cheering for an American team playing against his Canadian Olympic basketball team.

The controversy came to a head during a four-game tour of the American-dominated Athletes in Action team against the Canadian Olympic team. They played in Victoria, Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary.

Athletes in Action is sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ and their purpose is to present the message of Jesus Christ to the sports world.

"Don't get me wrong," said Donohue. "I'm not against their team. They're the best preparation we could possibly have."

He said he was just down on the fans.

"I don't know why a crowd wouldn't be juiced up for us when we come to town. We're their basketball team. And they're cheering for the Americans instead of us.

"It's upsetting. It was really bad in Victoria and Vancouver."

Donohue said "it's the Canadian mentality."

"If I had a team made up of Jesus Christ and the 12 Disciples and took them to Italy to play the Italian national basketball team, I guarantee you the Pope would cheer for Italy."

Rle Nichols, coach of Athletes in Action, said "it's an awkward situation."

"I understand why Jack is saying these sort of things. He's the national team coach and his job is to foster as much support as he can. He wants his team to feel that Canada is really behind them."

Donohue also said the officiating is in favor of Athletes in Action.

But Nichols said even if the officiating is going against the Canadian team, Athletes in Action are still doing them a favor.

"I'll tell you there won't be 10,000 people in Moscow cheering for Canada. There's every chance the officiating will go against them."

In Calgary Friday, Tom Bishop hit for 21 points and Jim Zoet added 19 to help the Olympic squad to an 83-70 win over AIA and a split of the four-game series. AIA won 81-78 in Edmonton on Thursday.

Saanich rallies in opening bout

Saanich Braves got off on the right foot but the Vancouver Island champions still have some work to do in the Pacific Coast junior "B" hockey final.

Braves, rebounding from a 3-2 deficit after the first period, edged tough Seattle Americans 6-4 Friday in the opening game of their best-of-three series being played at Pearkes Arena.

The second game was to be played this afternoon and the third, if needed, is scheduled for Sunday, starting at 1 p.m.

With a capacity crowd of over 500 looking on, the well-matched teams came up with a good game. Both goaltenders played well with Marty Wakelyn kicking out 32 shots and Seattle's Ted Jorve making 33 stops.

Tracy Patterson, singled out as the game's standout, Don McKay, Jim Michaels, Ian McLean, Jim Bowes and Marty Irvine scored Saanich goals. Jeff Morehouse, with two, Dennis Sorenson and Pat Lamb connected for Seattle.

The series winner will advance to the provincial final against the winners of a North-Interior playoff also being played this weekend.

Parker and Prezeau head fivepin parade

Jackie Parker and Darrell Prezeau, who both compete at Town and Country Lanes, captured the fivepin awards during the 23rd week of competition in the annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Jackie earned women's-division laurels by rolling a 261-293-323 — 877 series in the Saanich League while Darrell had a hot finish to top the men with a 302-238-403 — 943 series in the Friday Fun League.

All award winners are eligible to pursue trophies and cash in the 17th annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs. The fivepin rolloffs are scheduled for 1 p.m. May 4 at Town and Country. Tenpinners compete at Mayfair on April 27, also at 1 p.m.

Curtain going up on pro soccer

By The Ccanadian Press

Phil Parkes' stinginess helped Vancouver Whitecaps to the North American Soccer League championship last year. But, says Parkes, the Whitecaps rewarded his efforts by turning stingy themselves.

As a result, the league's top goalkeeper is playing for Chicago Sting in 1980 and his new team is a favorite to win the title.

The league's 14th season opens tonight with Tampa Bay Rowdies, champs of the NASL indoor league, at home to Washington Diplomats, California Surf at Vancouver, Atlanta Chiefs at Dallas Tornado, Fort Lauderdale Strikers at Memphis Rogues, Tulsa Roughnecks at Houston Hurricane and Detroit Express at Seattle Sounders.

Other Canadian entries in the 24-team league, Toronto Blizzard and Edmonton Drillers, play their first games next month. The Blizzard plays its first game in Fort Lauderdale on April 5, while the Drillers play San Jose in California on April 12.

The schedule gives each team 32 games, up two from last year.

Parkes and the Sting get busy April 12 at Tampa Bay. Chicago is a solid pick in the American Conference Central, while the Rowdies should rule the East and California or San Diego are picked to top the West.

In the National Conference, Washington and New York should wage a tough battle for the East crown, while Minnesota (Central) and Vancouver (West) should dominate their divisions.

Defender anxious

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — After he lost 7-2 to Canada in the opening round of the men's world curling championship, Kristian Soerum said his Norwegian rink would like another chance to play Rick Folk's Saskatchewan foursome.

Soerum, defending champion, is one step away from a rematch, needing a win over Jurg Tanner of Switzerland in today's semi-final.

Folk won all nine of his games in the round-robin portion of the 10-country Air Canada Silver Broom event to earn an automatic bye to Sunday's final.

In his final preliminary game Friday morning, Folk defeated stubborn Giuseppe Dal Molin of Italy 4-2. The Saskatoon skip then predicted his rink would win the world title.

Folk, 30, former Canadian mixed curling champion, never hesitates to mention his success rate in sudden-death games, including a 10-6 triumph over Northern Ontario in the Canadian championship earlier this month in Calgary.

"Right now, we're in a one-game showdown and we haven't lost very many of them over the past few years."

Folk, also a top amateur golfer in Saskatchewan, got off to a quick and impressive start in the opening draws of round-robin play last Monday.

He whipped Norway in the first round, although Soerum said his rink was not prepared because of the change in time zones and the long trip from Oslo.

Soerum, called one of the smartest skips in the championship by Canada's lead, Jim Wilson, is competing in his fifth consecutive world tournament. He eliminated Canadian opponents in 1979 and 1978 semi-finals.

"I've really come from the bottom to the top," said the civil engineer, 28. "When I look back now, I knew experience is what has helped me the most. I knew too little about curling when I first represented Norway in the competition.

"I've learned about being a skip over the years. I know now when you're supposed to take a chance and not take a chance to get points. I know how to fight back when we're behind. How to try and set things up.

"This might seem like little things but I didn't know much about anything at first."

Switzerland defeated Norway 6-5 when they met in round-robin at Moncton Coliseum earlier in the week. Last year, Soerum won the title when he beat Peter Attinger of Switzerland 5-4 after eliminating Barry Fry of Winnipeg 6-3 in the semi-finals.

FARM VACATIONS

Free booklet of farm hosts.

Do you want a different kind of vacation this summer . . . something you probably haven't done before?

Try a family farm vacation this year! Get away from the crowded concrete, noise and skyscrapers and meet friendly farm people in the peaceful countryside. Learn where your food comes from. See how those baby calves are born and how their mothers feed them — and you — with their milk!

You might help a little with the chores. You might also ride horses, hike, fish, swim or just plain relax beside a smooth duck pond. You, and especially the children, will really enjoy it. Individuals without families also are most welcome.

For a free booklet listing all the B.C. farm hosts, cut out the coupon and mail it to: Farm Vacation Program, Youth Development Branch, B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2Z7.

Joanne misses cut

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Joanne Carner finally missed a cut while Canadian Cathy Sherk, who lost her lead in a $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament when hampered by winds Friday, planned to fight back today.

Carner, this year's leading money-winner, fired her second consecutive 78 Friday, and failed to qualify for the final rounds for the first time since she turned pro in 1969. Her string spanned 236 tournaments.

Sherk entered today's third round with scores of 68 and 73 to her credit — a 141 total placing her fourth, three strokes back of leader Nancy Lopez-Melton.

Lopez-Melton, top drawing card on the women's tour, said after taking the lead that she is considering retiring.

She tied a tournament record Friday by burning up the course with a five-under-par 66.

"I'd like to win enough to get close to the LPGA Hall of Fame," said Lopez-Melton, 23, who has 17 tour victories in less than three years on the tour. To automatically qualify for the women's hall, she would have to win one more major title.

Her 66 gave her the lead for the first time this year.

Ruth loop in danger

A shortage of players is jeopordizing the future of the Saanich Evening Optimist Babe Ruth League.

Murray Stewart, one of the baseball league's coaches, said only 30 players have registered.

"That's enough for two teams but we need four to survive," he said.

In an effort to keep the league going, additional registrations are being accepted today and Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Reynolds Road Park. Additional information may be obtained by calling 383-5266 or 388-4562.

Victoria clubs win

KAMLOOPS — Vancouver Island's three representatives, all from Victoria, scored victories Friday in the opening round of the 16-team B.C. senior "B" men's basketball championship.

The easiest win went to Cuckoo Clock, which won by default when Penticton failed to show.

DataTech, with Bob Burrows scoring 33 points and Chris Hall adding 16, posted an 84-68 victory over Vancouver Nads while Island champion Henderson Realty rambled to a 129-77 decision over Terrace.

Ken Shields paced Hendersons with 28 points while Chris Trumpy added 21 and Jim Duddridge 19.

The knockout tournament concludes Sunday.

Foxall honored

Gordon Bennett and Hubert Foxall were front and centre at Friday's annual general meeting of the Victoria Seniors Curling Club.

Bennett was elected president, succeeding Jack Duffus, while Foxall's lengthy service to the club was recognized with the presentation of an honorary life membership.

Mart Miller, Bill Golbourn and Wilf Latournerie were named vice-presidents while Fred Dawe was elected secretary-treasurer. Directors elected were George Folkard, Stew Kidd, Ernie Hodkinson, Jack Elmsley, Neil MacKinnon, Agnar Bergman, Bob Noble, Bill Tribe and Gord Leckie.

Following are the club's trophy-winners:

Club championship — Gord Walker (skip), Harvey Mills, Jack Parr, Ted Farr.

Trueman Trophy — Jack Bowering (skip), John MacFarlane, Frank Hunt, Clarence Johnson.

Alton Trophy — Stew Kiddd (skip), Baldy Speers, W. Gordon Walker, Al Garrett.

Thornley Trophy — Fraser Cannon (skip), Jack Elmsley, Bert Walker, Gwilym Evans.

So you thought the Feb. 18 federal election was over and done with. Over, yes. Done with, no.

Now is the time for all good party men to analyze, poll by poll, now the votes were cast and apply that information to the provincial ridings.

What they will find when they go through the exercise is that a provincial election on Feb. 18 would have put the NDP back into power in B.C. with a modest majority.

The Socreds would have lost five seats and the NDP would have ended up with a 31-26 edge in the legislature — exactly the reverse of what now prevails.

Based on NDP gains in the federal voting the five Socreds in trouble are: Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot in Columbia River, Terry Segarty in neighbouring Kootenay, Jack Kempf in Omenica, George Mussalem in Dewdney and — the big surprise — Health Minister Rafe Mair in Kamloops.

A sixth Socred, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, is looking shaky and would be wise to do a nervous reassessment of his situation in Surrey.

"The general malaise from Dirty Tricks has reduced Socred support in their traditional strongholds," one NDP analyst claims.

However it would be premature for the Socreds to panic or the New Democrats to gloat.

Both sides know Premier Bill Bennett wouldn't think of calling an election when the odds are against him unless he's forced to and right now there is no sign of a lever big enough to force him.

The main effect of the information is to allow opposition members to tweak the Socreds in their self-esteem by issuing election challenges or making snide remarks about the governing party's lack of popularity.

There's a lot of it going around.

A stranger watching the honorable members in action this past week would wonder, as he tried to unravel the main thread of the debate, whether there was enough common sense in the whole kaboodle to bait a fishhook.

But the stranger would be mistaken. It's all very logical.

Well, maybe not logical to you and me but logical to a politician.

The loyal opposition have been pick-pick-picking away, attempting to demonstrate that Bennett tried to sell B.C. uranium when he was on his 1977 junket to Europe.

Government members have responded by spouting large quantities of smoke and invective in an attempt to shield their leader from this insidious line of questioning.

Now in 1977, there was no freeze on uranium mining and exploration in this province. The premier was on a selling trip and it was perfectly in order that he try to sell uranium along with lumber, copper and whatever else he had in his sample case. It would have been surprising if he hadn't.

So what's all the fuss about?

What the fuss is about is Bennett has denied he was pushing uranium on that trip.

The NDP don't care a hoot about Bennett peddling uranium. What they want to do is prove that Bennett lied.

Do you remember the horrific kefuffle when the NDP was in power and the Socreds accused Dave Barrett of lying to the legislature?

The incident occurred during the so-called chicken-and-egg war. What Barrett was supposed to have lied about has long since been forgotten. That, too, had nothing to do with the real point.

The point was the Socreds had branded Barrett as a liar.

Now the NDP are trying to put the same brand on Bennett's hide.

You may recall the Socreds making gleeful use of the "liar" issue throughout the 1975 election campaign and for some time after. Even now an occasional reference to chickens, eggs and Barrett creeps into Socred speeches.

If the New Democrats can make the label stick to Bennett, they'll be trying fo the same kind of political mileage.

Of course if the Socreds were right about Barrett and the chickens and the NDP are right about Bennett and the uranium, where does that leave the public?

Actually I believe the B.C. public is far more sophisticated than it's generally given credit for. The public doesn't expect politicians to be 100 per cent honest. It just expects them to be discreet.

If you are one of those Victorians who remembers the splash parties and the bottles under the table, your immediate reaction when you walk through the door will be a silent cry of outrage. What have they done with my memories?

I watched it happen to Victoria's professional old-timer, James K. Nesbitt, when he entered the Crystal Garden for his first look at the old lady in her new dress.

But after the initial flicker of doubt, James K. gave a nod of approval for what has been accomplished and promptly lapsed into the worst case of galloping nostalgia I've ever seen.

Not having any memories of the Old Crystal I can only say the refurbished Crystal is splendid and will quickly regain its position as a fashionable fixture of downtown Victoria.

I think I've fallen in love with a flamingo.

Historians recall deadly sea game

By PAT DUFOUR

It was a day for grizzled warriors.

An intent audience — several of them admirals — went back in time Friday as a German and a Canadian historian presented a historic drama outlining both sides of one of the grimmest, deadliest chess games of the Second World War — the Battle of the Atlantic.

The German was Dr. Jurgen Rohwer, Germany's leading authority on that country's navy during the war.

The Canadian was Dr. Alec Douglas, director of history at the national defence headquarters in Ottawa.

Douglas recalled the chilling signal "At them — attack them — sink them" which was traditionally sent to U-boats on the hunt for Allied convoys in the Atlantic and related the grim history of convoy SC42, which in September, 1941, lost several of its 64 merchant ships.

Many of those attending the three-day historic conference — The RCN In Retrospect — at Royal Roads, were admirals and for at least one of them, it was like reliving history.

Rear-Admiral J.C. Hibbard RCN (Rtd.) of 1211 Beach Drive, was a lieutenant-commander in 1941 in command of the destroyer HMCS Skeena, one of the Canadian escort vessels with the ill-fated convoy.

Douglas recalled how the convoy set out late, delayed by heavy gales and with its escort vessels running short of fuel.

HIBBARD
. . . he was there

The Skeena, he said, was a well-officered ship but with little experience.

She was to have plenty before the war ended, earning three battle honors, helping to sink a U-boat and harrassing the enemy during the Normandy landings.

At least one other Victoria resident took part in the 1941 testing.

Cmdr.Fred Grubb RCN (Rtd.) was then a lieutenant and in command of the corvette HMCS Moosejaw.

Douglas told how a U-boat captain acted when his ship was beaten.

"Not in the best traditions of the sea, he was the first to leave his ship and jumped from the conning tower on to the deck of the Moosejaw."

The audience, which included young history students, serving officers and men, as well as officer-cadets, were told how daring U-boat skippers would often steam on the surface in the middle of the convoy's columns, having found it one of the safest places to be in.

Rowher said in the early days of the war, before the Allies had adequate radar equipment, U-boats at night could detect enemy shipping seven miles away without fear of being detected themselves.

And with the aid of slides, he showed how the submarines worked in grid patterns, which constantly changed as the Allied convoys were rerouted to avoid attack.

He showed pictures of Canadian vessels like HMCS Restigouche and HMCS Columbia, which were to play leading roles in future convoys.

Rowher also showed slides of secret documents that proved the U.S. navy, working with the British Admiralty, had been co-operating and helping to escort convoys at least three months before Pearl Harbor.

The two speakers' papers, along with others presented at the unique conference, will be published for future reference by historians and naval students.

The entire conference is also being recorded.

Mayor tells police to change image

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier says it's high time police forces changed their image.

Couvelier told a crime prevention seminar at the Empress Hotel that policing styles must alter to keep pace with a rapidly-changing society.

In a speech to Greater Victoria law enforcement officials and administrators, Couvelier said the most important aspect of crime prevention is community support.

Police forces must start considering themselves public service agencies and develop close relationships with people they serve.

"No community could afford the cost of policing if risk of apprehension was the only motivation for not breaking the law. Respect for the law is far more important than fear of punishment."

Couvelier talked about a new age and the new morality; the rapid change taking place in traditional values.

Police departments should operate with restraint, empathy and sensitivity, he advised.

Administrators and government officials must find new operating styles in order to be relevant to the times, Couvelier said, quoting from several well known modern social historians to make his point.

Author Alvin Toffler (Future Shock) points out in his new book Third Wave this new era will have as great an impact on society as the industrial revolution, Couvelier told the group.

Toffler says young employees today are more interested in personal fulfillment than the work ethic and this change will shape the emerging social character, hopefully for the better, he continued.

Demands by future workers for greater freedom of choice will mean administrators will have to shift their thinking from managing a homogeneous workforce to satisfying diverse groups in numerous small workforces, Couvelier said.

He referred to Canadian philosopher Mark Satin, who says the generation under 20 years of age will demand individual fulfillment and resist the present industrial society's requirement for conformity.

"I am persuaded that the very successes of industrialized society are working to ensure its eventual demise, at least in North America," Couvelier said.

Couvelier said society's leaders must give serious thought to emerging philosophical changes.

Jetfoil rush predicted

Heavy demand for seats on a twice-a-day jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle was predicted Friday by Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele.

The service, supplementing the daily Queen of Prince Rupert sailing, is to start May 15.

"We are expecting that every seat will be filled for every sailing," he said, although a one-way ticket on the 250-seat jetfoil will cost $25 (U.S).

"There may be a reduced-rate offer for a round trip and lower fares for children and groups are being considered," Steele said.

No home for 15-year-old drug user

By MIKE HUGHES

A provincial human resources ministry spokesman told a family court hearing Friday the ministry is unable to provide an adequate foster home for a 15-year-old boy who has completed a 30-day sentence in a detention centre for purse snatching.

The boy, who has a drug abuse problem, appeared in family court and was released on probation by Judge Lawrence Brahan.

The judge ordered him to do 50 hours of community work and to write letters of apology to the two elderly ladies whose purses were taken.

The boy was allowed to spend the weekend at his parents' home on the understanding that efforts will continue next week to find an alternative setting.

Earlier this week, the mother of the boy and Victoria Ald. Gretchen Brewin expressed concern about the lack of facilities for dealing with cases like the 15-year-old.

He is being tested now for possible brain damage from the use of LSD.

His mother said she is convinced if her boy was placed in a foster home he would blow it.

"I'll give him a week and he'll be right back in," she said.

Brewin, a member of the Family Court Committee, said it is time the community became more aware of the way juveniles are treated and the shortage of adequate facilities.

Because of the parents' difficulty in dealing with the boy he had been made a ward of the B.C. superintendent of child welfare.

The court was told professionals working on the case don't recommend he stay home for any lengthy period because the domestic situation seems to produce negative behavior and, at times, violence.

Doug Woodall, a human resources ministry representative, said a group home is no good for the boy, who needs a setting where he can get one-to-one therapy.

"It is an unfortunate position but we just don't have that," he told the court.

However, he said human resources will continue looking for an adequate foster home in the Victoria area because it is important that the family connection be maintained.

In another case Friday, a 15-year-old boy, described as "a highly volatile young man," had his probation extended for another year and was ordered to do 100 hours of community work for willful damage and causing a disturbance.

He was allowed to stay with his mother but under a number of conditions including a weekly report to his probation officer and attendance for 16 weekends at a human resources camp in Metchosin.

He is also to have consultations with a child care worker for at least 15 hours a week.

Auxiliary probation officer Dave Borgstrom described the boy as highly volatile.

He said that although a committee of professionals had recommended residential treatment it was felt that removing him from his mother would create more problems.

He said a job had been lined up for the boy and a close watch would be kept on him by the professional people involved including the police.

"If he burps, we'll know about it," he told the judge.

Al Mollberg, regional manager for the human resources ministry, said although residential treatment was recommended, there was a problem in finding an adequate place.

He said what facilities are available don't meet the boy's needs.

However, he said he supported the long-term goal of supervising the boy in the community.

Outside the courtroom, Mollberg said he doesn't think residential treatment centres are the answer.

He said the treatment of the 15-year-old is a good example, with a number of professional people pooling their skills to help him within the community.

SHAKIN' ALL OVER — Cedar shake roofing and heavy wood beams are part of the design of a new village-style shopping mall under construction by Beacon Hill Plaza Ltd. at Quadra and McKenzie. The mall, named Saanich Centre, will include London Drugs, a food store and office space. It's estimated new centre should be open for business by summer

Three injured in crash

Three people were taken to hospital with minor injuries following a two-car collision on Pat Bay highway at Mount Newton Crossroad at 2 a.m. today.

The trio — they were not identified — suffered lacerations and were taken to Saanich Peninsula Hospital for treatment, Central Saanich police said.

In Sooke, RCMP officers reported that the Batvan was active overnight and two people were charged with impaired driving.

Several others received roadside suspensions for a breath reading above the .08 limit.

The Batvan will be in operation in the Sooke area again tonight, police said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 30, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on partnership, knowing what you need and what is expected in return. Define meanings, bring "terms" into focus. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently. Spotlight on marital status, contractual obligations, seeing people in realistic light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Production, responsibility, distribution and a "very important" relationship command spotlight. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. Older person is in your corner — and you will be aware of it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish rather than begin — a relationship is "tested." Bring forth creative resources. Change occurs, contains elements of excitement and surprise. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. You could fall head-over-heels in love!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let go of the old — stride ahead, accent originality, independence and faith in your own convictions. Leo plays key role. Short trips, messages, visitors and relatives crowd your personal scenario. Get second wind!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do more socializing than signing of contracts or making firm commitments. Avoid direct confrontations; stress flexibility, humor, versatility, Gemini, Scorpio, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Intuitive flash provides answers, pays dividends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Elements of timing, intuition and luck combine as you succeed in financial transaction. Accent on valuables, personal possessions, budget, income potential and ability to obtain a genuine bargain. Gemini, Libra, Sagittarius persons figure in exciting scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are on more solid ground than originally anticipated. Know it, be direct, confident and take initiative. Your own judgment serves as most reliable guide. Review written material — read between the lines. Aquarian is in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If analytical, you solve a "mystery." Perceive motives, look beyond superficial indications. Dig deep for reasons, keep promises made to one confined to home or hospital. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play significant roles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have choice — harmony or intrigue. Accent on wishes, desires, lifestyle, domestic situation. Romantic interlude should be viewed in proper perspective. Business endeavor could lead to advancement, payment of dividends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Learn what is expected of you, outline duties, perceive potential and avoid self-deception. Pisces, Virgo persons figure in scenario. Events occur which aid in elevating your standing in community. One in authority "pulls strings" for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect coincides now with distance, future plans, long-range educational or publishing project. Money, which had been "tied up," is released. Cancer, Capricorn persons play outstanding roles. Special correspondence is featured.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If merely "playing games," move on. Emphasis on involvement, investment, time-consuming endeavors. One close to you discusses money and what to do about it. Decision is at hand concerning beginning or ending of an association.

IF MARCH 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a combination of aggressiveness and sensitivity. You have reare ability to laugh at your own foibles. You are versatile, artistic, fond of travel and you can be the "life of the party." Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment, possibly a change of residence, indicated for you in 1980. September and November are highlight months. In April, you gain opportunity to be more independent, to make contact with exciting, creative members of opposite sex. You are inventive, an original thinker and you have a tendency to scatter your forces. Weight problems are not strangers to you.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, march 31, 1980

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be aware of legal ramifications affecting current projects. Maintain low profile, do plenty of listening and observing. Plant seeds for future, play waiting game. Bring priorities into focus. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on basic services, employment, willingness to let go of losing proposition. Long-distance communication provides reasons for optimism. What appears to be a setback could actually be a stepping-stone to progress.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take steps towards greater independence of thought, action. Chance meeting could be start of "something big." Accent on adventure, speculation, creative endeavors and romantic involvement. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Follow through on hunch — teach and learn, give full rein to intuitive intellect. Get on more secure base — obtain valid appraisals. Accent on home, property, family structure. Another Cancer, a Leo and a Scorpio figure in scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Aura of celebration exists. Social activity accelerates. Display versatility, humor and plan ahead for travel. Imprint style, show that you can express self in meaningful, entertaining manner. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in exciting scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Play cards close to chest, especially where financial matters are concerned. Be specific, attend to details, get information concerning basic values. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. You may be asked to revise written material.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle favors change, individual effort, variety and fresh concepts. Circumstances are due to favor your efforts; you will be at right place at crucial moment. Be confident, trust your own judgment. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Significant gain results from "secret" meeting. Get behind scenes view of current situation. Someone is trying to tell you something in a discreet way. Be receptive, keep promises made to family member. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be creatively skeptical of one who is pleasant but has tendency to make many promises. Key is to discriminate, to choose quality over quantity. Member of opposite sex wants reassurances concerning security. Pisces person is in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Organize files, get house in order. You are due to receive an important assignment or a special honor. Another Capricorn and a Cancer figure in scenario. Accent on stating needs, opening dialogue with professional superior. Older person becomes an ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish what you start. Look beyond immediate prospects. Stress communication, distribution and display — you are due to receive added recognition. Accent on enlightenment, ability to express self in manner which gains wide attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could solve a "mystery." Cycle is good for locating lost objects, discovering missing puzzle pieces. Take initiative in making new starts in new directions. Get financial accounting. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario.

IF MARCH 31 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are loyal, perceptive, persistent, capable of fighting for principles. You had a mental blMHueprint of future at a relatively early age. It is likely that you were separated in actual or psychological sense from one or both parents while still young. Scorpio, Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. October could be one of your most memorable months of 1980, a year in which you perfect techniques and decide what should be kept or discarded. In April, you have intuitive flash which enables you to strike pay dirt. Family member is due to make conciliatory gesture.

THE CRYSTAL GARDEN. WELCOME BACK.

Today at 10:00 a.m. the Crystal Garden opens its doors to Victoria and celebrates a brand new era.

It all begins with a lush, tropical garden. (But that's only the start.) With great care and love we've revived this special Victoria landmark that first opened over 50 years ago. With special regard for its heritage and history we've made it as alive today as it was back in 1925. Again the doors will open to thrill Victorians and visitors alike to an exciting new world of visual delights.

Today the Crystal is filled with exotic plants and birds. Seven speciality shops. A tea garden. And a new restaurant called Rattenbury's, opening soon. It's the best of the past and the present. All in one extraordinary place.

So come. Spend an hour. Spend a day. Welcome back the Crystal to Victoria. Admission is free for one week.

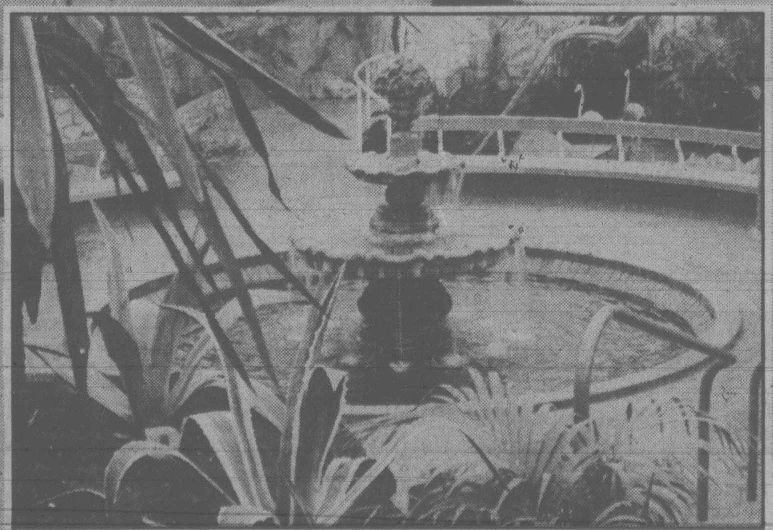
The Crystal Garden blooms again.

Free admission for one week.
Saturday, March 29 through Friday, April 4.

Crystal Garden

Opening hours:
10 a.m. to 10 p.m. (until April 4)
10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. (after April 4)

The Provincial Capital Commission
Hon. Hugh Curtis,
Minister responsible.



It's all Crystal clear — she's a winner

Victorians may soon have a problem determining which Crystal they are referring to.

But really, it's crystal clear.

Right now we have the Crystal Garden, formerly known as the old Crystal following the construction of the Crystal Pool.

But it can't be termed old, although new doesn't seem quite precise either.

Regardless of how that problem's solved, the common habit of calling it the Crystal Gardens — plural — must be avoided at all costs if tradition is to be upheld.

In all other respects though, the distinction will be obvious.

The Crystal Garden is unlike any other indoor garden in Victoria and will be an attraction to tourists from across the continent.

The rejuvenation cost $2.72 million.

For that outlay, the building has been turned into a garden attraction complete with waterfall, aviary, fountain, reptile house, licensed lounge, tea gardens, theatre, dance floor and retail stores.

But of course the feature attraction is the garden.

What was once the pool has been turned into a garden complete with exotic plants.

One of the most striking features is the variety of levels from which the whole garden can be viewed.

Architect David Hambleton whose firm Wagg and Hambleton, developed the concept and oversaw the work, says it's been designed to emphasise that feature.

Some areas, he said, will feel like the bottom of the jungle floor while in other areas, the overview won't be unlike that a treetop Tarzan might get.

The firm faced a variety of problems when it tackled the project, he said.

The building had been vacant for sometime before work began.

The glass roof had many broken panes and the building was partially filled with water.

Vagrants had been living in it and fires had been started.

Hambleton said a number of items were damaged beyond repair but fortunately most of the building's fittings were replaced with similar objects.

"It's been a terrific challenge to restore the building so that it retains the character so fondly remembered by many Victorians while meeting the modern needs of the community," Hambleton said.

There are still some distinctive flaws about the building though, he said.

For example if one stands on Douglas Street and casts a critical eye down the roof top one will notice a distinct sag in the Crystal's middle.

Hambleton said this was caused by the weight of the pool water. The original builder didn't take this into account in the original design.

While the sag forced custom construction work, it doesn't mean there are any safety hazards or even possiblities of more sagging, he said.

The building was designed in 1924 to sit on a concrete pad which literally floats on the mudflat land below.

The garden has a number of permanent residents including colorful and exotic birds which live among the plants.

Two pink flamingoes wade delicately in their own pool.

Hyacinth macaws, pink-necked pigeons and yellow-streaked loris are just a few of the exotic species living in the gardens.

At one time monkeys were considered but eventually that idea was abandoned because they're easily excited and become excessively noisy.

Local flower clubs will be encouraged to put on displays and shows in the gardens.

Rex Murfitt and Don Adams are responsible, respectively, for the plants and birds in the Crystal and both men have impressive plans for future development of the gardens.

Adams intends to breed the birds and Murfitt, like all gardeners, can be expected to be constantly reworking the gardens.

One of the few artifical additions to the building is the use of fibreglass material for the waterfall and stream that runs the length of the gardens.

The Crystal has a dance floor and room for private parties and anyone wishing to trip the light fantastic may be interested in an inaugural dinner dance planned for the garden April 12 by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Tickets are $40 each and the affair is open to the public.

The atmosphere lends nostalgia

Fifty-five years ago the Crystal Garden held its first opening ceremony.

Friday, a rejuvenated Crystal — one which deserves the name garden even more than the 1925 version — was reopened in an equally festive ceremony.

While society has changed a lot during those 55 years, the new Crystal — and this should make all nostalgia buffs happy — has managed to retain the aura that surrounded it way back in 1925 when its opening was billed as one of the biggest and grandest events ever in the city's history.

When it opened, the Crystal was the kind of place that Noel Coward could have used as a set for his plays.

It conjured up images of young flappers lolling in rattan chairs in the lounge and dashing young men resplendent in tails taking a plunge in the pool.

That scenario fitted the Crystal of 1925 and the good news is that it works just as well for the 1980 version though the swimming pool has been replaced with a garden and the only thing capable of being plunged into is a decorative fountain.

Architect David Hambleton, of Wagg and Hambleton, the firm responsible for designing and overseeing the renovations, makes no bones about his happiness over the project.

He bluntly calls it the kind of job an architect gets only once in a lifetime — an exciting challenge.

Hambleton said the firm took great care in its work on the Crystal to make sure that modern additions, such as elevators, were as much in harmony with the original building as possible.

The Times of 1925 grandly referred to the Crystal as "the wonder palace of the West" and the community seemed to agree.

Its opening ceremony was a three-day affair which included the largest swimming meet ever held in Western Canada and parties with guests that included the cream of Victoria's society.

The opening of the new Crystal Friday had a more democratic tone with the garden thrown open to the public at no charge — a situation which will last for a week.

Until next Saturday the Crystal will be open each day from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. so Victorians can have a look-see.

The hours of operation for the next week will be the same but admission will be charged.

Once in full operation, the garden will have regular hours of 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The admission prices: Adults $2, children between the ages of six and 16 $1, and senior citizens free in the off season and regular admission in the summer season of June, July, August and September.

Daily family passes will be available for $5 and a season's pass will be available for the price of admission plus $2.

Summer hours, begin June 1 and end September 30 and are from 10 a.m to 9:30 p.m.

Old timers who used to swim in the Crystal wouldn't recognize her now.

What was billed as the largest and best salt water pool in the world has gone and in its place, is a botanical garden complete with exotic birds and reptiles.

During the years when the building housed a swimming pool many well-known swimmers journeyed to Victoria to take a dip.

Johnny Weismuller, then the fastest swimmer in the world and later to become famous as a movie Tarzan, was just one tourist who caused quite a stir when he dropped in for a swim.

The original Crystal Garden was the result of a deal between Victoria and the Canadian Pacific Railway, which owned the then 15-year-old Empress Hotel.

The Empress had been built with a concession that it wouldn't have to pay taxes or water bills for 15 years.

When the time came for those charges to be levied the city agreed that if the CPR would build what was then called an amusement centre on property near its hotel, the city would fix the hotel taxes at $15,000 annually and charge a flat rate of $5,000 per year for water.

The CPR went along with the deal and part of the mudflats that stretched between the hotel and St. Ann's Academy and which had earlier been used as a garbage dump, became the site of the centre.

The Crystal Garden was designed by Francis Rattenbury and Leonard James and cost about $250,000.

The brick, steel and glass structure was not unlike a typical greenhouse of the time and its general appearance was reminiscent of the Crystal Palace which was built for the Great Exhibition of 1851.

The Crystal continued to be a landmark and tourist attraction for years until the late 60's when the building began to show the ravages of time.

Poor ventilation and corrosion from the salt water vapors that came from the pool were two of the main problems.

Conditions became so bad that the orchestras which played for the frequent dances were often sheltered beneath canopies which also helped with the acoustic problem that plagued the building.

In 1955, the pool was changed from a salt water system to fresh water in an attempt to solve some of those problems.

But a break in the chlorine system that sent 34 people to hospital in 1967 signalled the end of the Crystal as a swimming pool.

In 1971, the pool was closed when the new Crystal Pool on Quadra Street was opened.

For the next 10 years Victoria city council discussed, pondered and delayed a decision on what to do with the building that was fondly thought of by so many Victorians.

At one time in 1968 the old building came dangerously close to being torn down.

So close, in fact, that one reporter on the municipal beat began a story: "Victoria's famous but shaky Crystal Garden will disappear during the next two years."

The public protest that followed such suggestions is credited with convincing politicians to save the building.

Finally, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, a former city alderman who'd always expressed a desire to save the Crystal, came through with the funding necessary to refurbish it.

Bawlf dreamed of creating a lush garden oasis under glass.

Friday, it all became a reality.

Stylish but comfortable seating in revamped Crystal will ease those tired feet.

Revenue looks good

The Crystal Garden will be a beautiful addition to Victoria.

And even better, it's designed to pay for itself.

For a start, it will contain seven retail outlets.

Most will be ready when the Crystal offically opens although Rattenbury's, the main restaurant which is operated by Christopher Kausten, is still six to eight weeks away from opening.

Other stores will provide ice cream and sweets, high quality handicrafts and folk art, photo finishing, specially made soap, antiques and collectibles and an art gallery speciallizing in Canadian art.

With a minimum 220,000 paid admissions per year — and that's considered conservative — the Crystal should operate in the black.

The prediction is for an annual revenue of about $500,000.

Annual operating costs are not yet known but are not expected to be large because the permanent staff will be small — only six — and the overhead is expected to be minimal.

Nurses pay outruns budget

The health ministry may have to cut some services to pay for the hefty contract settlement worked out earlier this week by the province's 12,500 registered nurses, Health Minister Rafe Mair said Friday.

The contract, which negotiators for the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., have recommended be accepted, would boost salaries an average 44 per cent over 27 months.

Mair said total cost of the package will be $100 million — $60 million more than budgeted for.

He said the money will have to come from somewhere and "whether that comes by us paring some of our programs or whether it comes as the government providing more money out of new revenues remains to be seen.

"I wouldn't want anybody listening to this to suddenly panic and say my goodness the government is going to withdraw this or withdraw that," he said.

"It's no different than a family who is faced with some sudden expense that they hadn't fully anticipated. We either go out and earn more money or we cut back some of our expenditures or we do a little bit of both."

Meanwhile, Mair said the government is prepared for a possible strike by government nurses.

The Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C., which represent 2,700 nurses employed at mental health institutions and public health units, served 72-hour strike notice Wednesday on the Government Employees Relations Bureau.

They want an improvement on the government's latest offer of a 24-per-cent wage increase over three years.

Mair said ministry staff have all cancelled vacations and trips so they can pitch in as management in the event that there is a strike.

Bush flight tax not right: MLA

The NDP MLA for the remote northern riding of Atlin says it's not right to tax special travel benefits given northern workers.

It's even worse to tax them retroactively, says Al Passarell.

He asked the legislature Friday to hold an emergency debate on Revenue Canada's decision to classify the flights as taxable benefits for income tax purposes.

The motion was ruled out of order.

The twice-a-year flights are necessary to preserve the sanity of workers in remote areas, Passarell said, adding a few days in Vancouver or Edmonton is the best cure for cabin fever.

"It's like the army's R and R after a term of service," he said.

Companies operating in the north have been providing the free flights for years, and up to now they have not been considered taxable.

Now, however, northern workers are getting notices that they must pay tax on these travel benefits retroactive for the past two years.

Passarell estimates as many as 20,000 workers in northern B.C. may be getting surprise tax bills of up to $1,000 for their de-bushing flights.

The NDP member has written to Prime Minister Trudeau asking that he look into the situation immediately, but he isn't optimistic about help from that quarter.

Trudeau promised during the recent election to delay implementing the tax change until its effects were fully studied. "Once again Pierre Trudeau is breaking a promise to the people of the north," said Passarell.

He said he will be pressing the issue during the debate on the premier's estimates in the legislature.

Transit loan at 14.3%

The provincial cabinet has given approval to the Urban Transit Authority to borrow $30 million at a rate of 14.3 per cent to finance transit operations, Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said today.

The funds will be made available as a loan to the authority from provincially-administered accounts.

Agreement on terms of the loan was reached earlier this month by Curtis and Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich, the UTA chairman.

The cabinet also has raised the maximum borrowing rates allowed for school, hospital and higher education funding to 16 per cent in the coming year.

The previous maximum allowable interest rate for borrowing from Canadian Pension Plan funds was 14 per cent, although actual borrowing rates have been considerably lower.

Curtis said he anticipates funds will be borrowed below the 16 per cent ceiling but the ceiling was raised because of today's escalating interest rates.

Government makes last call for free BCRIC applicants

The provincial government will make one final attempt to reach the 50,000 British Columbians who have not yet picked up their five free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said Friday his ministry will send a letter to each of the applicants asking them to name a main post office and a 15-day period in which they can make the pickup.

Previous deadline for picking up the shares was Feb. 29.

Curtis said the government is making this final effort because many of the 50,000 people may work in an areas which are a long way from government offices.

The corporation will hold its first annual shareholders meeting April 7 at the Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver.

Sidney mayor seeks overpass

An overpass at the intersection of Pat Bay Highway and Wain Road is needed to protect school children in the area, says Sidney Mayor Norma Sealey.

Sealey said an overpass was requested in a letter she wrote to Highways Minister Alex Fraser last fall.

North Saanich municipality received a plan from the ministry for it last week.

Although the intersection is close to the Sidney border, it is in North Saanich and therefore up to that municipality to do something about.

Last year the ministry suggested North Saanich pay about $20,000 of the estimated $100,000 cost of overpass.

A 13-year-old boy was killed at the intersection last June when the bike he was riding collided with a tractor-trailer.

"As a former school trustee and a member of the community, I recognize the intersection is very dangerous because of the number of children crossing there to attend North Saanich school and Parkland school," Sealey said.

Penalties eased in dyed gas cases

The provincial consumer taxation branch is now responsible for enforcement of the Colored Gasoline Tax Act, and graduated penalties have replaced the permanent suspension penalty, the finance ministry said Friday.

Previously, oil companies and their bulk agents were disqualified permanently from dyeing fuel for industrial and farm vehicles when a bulk agent was convicted of contravening the act by selling gas without the dye.

The taxation branch now will deal with infractions.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

This spring's clothes are so wearable! . . .

Well, so it goes . . . browsing in the Grand Bazaar in Istanbul one week . . . breezing through our favorite Victoria stores the next! . . . and while the latter may not be so exotic, they're certainly a joy to shop in . . . and no haggling either, thank the Lord! . . . Charmante's delighted us on Monday with their pretty new clothes for spring . . . Pallas handloomed linen knits from Ireland . . . Versatile natural shade in a two-piece belted style with V-neck, long sleeves and A-line skirt . . . Also in white with low neck and peplum top . . . New Castleberry knit jacket dress in pale rose and pale blue . . . Sleeveless dress has scoop neck and jacket is long sleeved and buttons down the front . . . Some other new dacron-polyester knits just unpacked are extremely attractive! . . . Charmante's have a new line of dresses by Caron . . . Very smart styles in the new shades for spring . . . yellows, browns . . . and of course the ever-popular navy . . . in two-piece styles with jackets . . . Also a good selection of 2-pce. dresses from other manufacturers . . . A delightful 3-pce. knit outfit . . . a size 16 . . . is gold with a red jersey top and red/white/gold cord belt . . . There are really smart half-size dresses and jacket dresses . . . And if you're needing a jacket to top that special dress or skirt . . . do look at the great selection at Charmante's! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555

Worth a trip to Oak Bay!

Another delight was visiting Dion's Boutique where we zoomed in like a homing pigeon on their velour separates . . . One of the gals on our trip travelled in just such a velour pant outfit and not only did she extol its comfort, but always looked so fresh and smart . . . (Velour washes like a charm!) . . . Well, Dion's have a nice range of those versatile velour tops, jackets, pants and skirts . . . in vibrant shades and head-turning styles . . . so don't go into spring without getting yours! . . . A really nice selection of dresses in this Oak Bay boutique too . . . We admired a rose supersuede dress with trapunto embroidery on the bolero jacket . . . soft polyester top . . . And simply styled summer dresses to see any woman smartly through the coming season! . . . We know many of you don't want to spend a great deal on your summer wardrobe and Dion's know it too . . . So they have charming little dresses from as low as $60 . . . We especially liked a gold ribbed cotton with short sleeves and blue-red-gold striped belt . . . and a turquoise cotton with cap sleeves . . . the sort of dress one could do a lot with! . . . More dresses are probably in by the time you read this . . . and some super-duper cotton T-shirts in beautiful styles and colors will be in this coming week . . . We learned, too, that a lot of gorgeous lingerie and loungewear from Linda and Carolyn was due in any minute . . . as well as lovely slippers . . . Dion's Boutique, 2045 Oak Bay Ave., 595-5444.

Standard proudly presents . . .

Purveyors of lighting magic

Seems to us we saw innumerable light fixture stores in the Middle East . . . each one more garish than the last . . . so what a treat to come back here and visit Beston's Lighting Exclusive . . . a veritable bastion of good taste and quality in everything pertaining to lighting! . . . Right now they have some very pretty porcelain table lamps with an oriental influence . . . One has a white Buddha base . . . others are painted or have raised designs . . . Right next to them is an interesting lacquered wood oriental chest with brass lock and corners . . . Three small lined drawers and a cupboard inside . . . a long drawer underneath . . . This would fill a multitude of needs, and fit nicely into most decors . . . There are some good-looking Canadian ceramic lamps . . . very simple, but well designed . . . Noticed one in a beautiful deep blue with gold . . . a color being shown a lot in home accessories this year . . . Have you ever seen an infinity mirror? It has a series of tiny bulbs behind it which, when lit, give a very pleasing 3-dimentional design . . . real conversation piece, in fact! Unlit, it's a regular mirror . . . There's a gorgeous Strass crystal floor lamp with brass plate finish which would look really beautiful in a formal room . . . A little matching table lamp for this . . . And for a hard-to-fit spot in your room . . . a charming little hanging planter with a light over it! . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

Say "Happy Easter" with something from Purdy's . . .

Easter's a-coming and the bunnies and chicks and eggs are having a field day at all Purdy's stores . . . There's "The Easter Egg Rabbit," in solid chocolate, ranging in size from 4 oz. to 25 lb., 3 ft. tall "Charlie" (who sells for $100!) and 7 lb. "Annabelle," an amiable rabbit with a smiling face . . . The small bunnies also come in white chocolate at $2.85 . . . Other rabbits carry baskets or huge eggs like the "Happy Pack" rabbits which weigh 1 lb. and cost $6.25 . . . Purdy's have all kinds of gaily decorated Easter baskets . . . Big ones containing goodies for all ages . . . children's baskets and baskets specifically for grown-ups . . . priced from about $7 to $35 . . . And the loveliest eggs! . . . 1¼ and 5-lb. sizes in dark or chocolate filled with milk and dark chocolates . . . Half shells filled with little foil-colored eggs or Party Mix . . . Particularly nice for the kiddies . . . as is the "Child's Easter Surprise" . . . a flat bix with acetate top containing a chocolate bunny-stamped plaque, small cream eggs and foil eggs . . . And did we tell you about all the luscious cream eggs starting at little ones at 4 for $1 and going up to ½-lb. ones at $1.35? . . . If you'd like to make up your own baskets, there are lots of things to fill them with . . . And do see the cute children's ceramic mugs with pictures of rabbits or ducks, filled with Easter goodies from . . . Purdy's, Hillside Mall, 595-1241, Mayfair Mall, 385-5032 and Empress, 385-3555.

Alcheringa is full to the brim . . .

Alcheringa is literally bursting at the seams with its latest shipment from New Zealand! . . . Among the new things are the platypus slippers so many people have been waiting for since they sold out their pre-Christmas stock . . . Washable and really nice . . . Also another much-wanted item . . . those sheepskin golf trundle mitts . . . now modified a bit for better fit on one's golf cart . . . You may not need one of these dandy hand warmers now . . . but remember, next winter is coming and you'd be wise to get one while the going's good! . . . There's a new lot of beautiful machine-washable lambskin rugs . . . white and natural colors, for as little as $39.95 . . . And because Alcheringa has to make room somehow for new stock, at the moment you can get sheepskin car seat covers from $42.95 . . . and baby care rugs for $29.95 (should by rights be $42.95!) . . . We saw a fine selection of sheepskin hats . . . one in Astra, a curly white sheepskin . . . Some with brims, others like riding hats . . . And Alcheringa now have "bus driver's seat covers" which keep the dear men comfortable and either cool or warm as the weather calls for! For hikers, joggers, skaters or just walkers . . . there are sheepskin shoe innersoles at only $3.98 a pair. Because they "breathe" your feet don't get hot and sticky like they do with synthetic insoles . . . Adorable sheepskin stuffed lambs and bunnies to delight a child at Easter! . . . Alcheringa, 616 Trounce Alley, 383-8224.

Pet can slither in close quarters

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Kingsley
3-30
Buel

Dear Dr. Miller: I'm building a cage for Kingsley, my snake. He's three feet long. Friends say the cage should be twice as long as the snake for exercise. I don't have quite that much room. Do I have to? I'm thinking of using that wire that comes in little squares for the front of the cage so he'll have lots of fresh air. Is that a good idea? — A.N.

Dear A.N.: Keeping Kingsley cooped up in a slightly smaller cage shouldn't cause concern. Snakes don't jog nor are they inclined to exercise in any strenuous fashion. They rarely even need to tretch their full length, so you should have plenty of room. Adequate ventilation is essential in a snake sanctuary, but hardware cloth would better be used on the top of the cage. A sheet of plexiglass or something similar is better used for visibility cross the front because it provides a smooth surface.

There should be no projections or roughness of any kind on any surface of the cage where Kingsley could scratch himself on it. The inside must be smooth not only to prevent injury but for cleaning.

Dear Dr. Miller: Our two young children think they need a dog. We agree. Which would you consider a more appropriate pet for them, a male or a female? — T.G.

Dear T.G.: The breed, or at least the temperament, of the particular puppy being chosen is far more important than its sex. Both the mother and her puppies should be outgoing and friendly without signs of nervousness of aggression. A local veterinarian should help you verify your choice as a good one, both physically and psychologically, within 48 hours of the time you select it. And it should be returnable if this doctor determines it is, for some reason, an undesirable choice.

Puppies and children go together quite naturally but, of course, all need careful guidance until they're old enough to be responsible for their actions. As a rule, I'd recommend a female puppy, spayed when she reaches an appropriate age, as the best choice. She's likely to be a little cleaner, a little more gentle and a little less likely to wander.

Dear Dr. Miller: Could Rouster, our bantam rooster, give us chicken pox? — A.P.

Dear A.P.: No. Even if you were susceptible to chicken pox and Rouster rooster had pox, it couldn't give it to you. Strangely enough, chickens can't transmit chicken pox, only bird pox, and this virus is not transmissible to humans.

Dear Dr. Miller: Henry, my Himalayan, appears to be losing some of the coloring from his long ears and nose. This has just happened since I began putting him in the sun a lot.

Could he actually be fading from the sunshine, or am I just imagining all this? — K.T.

Dear K.T.: I presume Henry is a Himalayan rabbit, not a cat. While a cat's coat too would be altered some by bright sunlight, rabbits particularly are heat and light sensitive, and in bright sunlight do tend to lose coloring. Cooling it, literally, for Henry, while reducing strong sunlight exposure, would help him to restore his velvety colored markings on ears, nose, feet and tail.

Dear Dr. Miller: Why would an 8-year-old Chihuahua suddenly look very pregnant? I know Pancho can't be — he's always been a male. — O.A.

Dear O.A.: You're right, while Pancho's paunch can't possibly be related to pregnancy, his predicament could be even more serious. The distention could be related to anything from heart trouble (and related ascites and abdominal fluid) to a tumor. He needs to be kept quiet and avoid all stress.

Most importantly, though, his doctor should promptly check out Pancho's prominent problem.

Pandas for Japan

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — A pair of giant pandas arrived here from Canton, China, for a two-month stay at the Fukuoka zoo to mark the establishment of a sister-city union between Fukuoka and Canton.

The pandas — a 24-year-old male called Shan Shan and 17-year-old female named Ipao Ling — were accompanied by five Chinese officials.

Mumbles a sign ears need check

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I am partially deaf. I can hear most people, except people who talk very softly and especially those who mumble. I have been putting off buying a hearing aid. At what point should this be done?

Mr. K.C.

Dear Mr. C.:

There are two key in points in your letter. One is that you admit you are partially deaf. If your "partial deafness" does not interfere with your daily activities and if you can hear under all social circumstances, then you are not deaf. Once you admit to "partial" deafness, you are really saying, "Under certain circumstances I can't hear."

The second point is that you attribute your impaired hearing to those who speak softly and to those who "mumble." Obviously people with good hearing can hear those people who talk softly and whom you accuse of mumbling.

There is only one real, mature and adult way to recognize deafness. When a person has difficulty in hearing sounds, and full words, and when hearing on the telephone is impaired, then the possibility of deafness must be admitted. When you cannot clearly hear the radio or television, and when the direction of sounds is confusing, there is need for some amplification of sound.

The ideal way to handle the problem of deafness is to have a complete examination by an otologist, the specialist in problems of the ear and hearing. This examination will include careful scrutiny of the ears and the eardrums. Then testing of the hearing is done with tuning forks and with a pure-toned audiometer. Air conduction and bone conduction studies will be made. Sometimes x-rays of the mastoid are done, especially if chronic infection of the ears is present.

After all this data is accumulated, the otologist can now determine the exact nature of the hearing impairment. When once this is done, a program is laid out. If treatment for an infection is necessary, then active treatment is undertaken with antibiotics to control it.

In the absence of infection, the hearing difficulty is evaluated. In some instances surgery is remarkably effective. A condition known as otosclerosis now lends itself to a number of operations which can restore hearing to serviceable levels.

In those instances where surgery is not the ideal method of choice, hearing aids may be tried to amplify one's own hearing capacity. Hearing aid manufacturers and distributors have become very important members of the health team. They are highly trained to follow the instructions of the otologist and the audiologist (specialists in hearing problems).

Today, the people who sell these instruments are not just salesmen intent on making a sale. Rather they are guided by a great sense of responsibility to those who are painfully isolated by their hearing impairment.

Dr. Coleman welcomes letters from his readers. Personal replies, however, are not possible and only topics of broadest interest will be referred to. Write c/o Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

A little lost in the translation

knit & chat with May MacLean

I've had some letters about the Swan Doiley directions on pattern No. 7953.

The directions state "inserting the hook from the front, work one single crochet round the bar of first single crochet" and the directions go on referring again to the "bar."

As these directions were originally from England and changed to Canadian terminology, perhaps the word "post" should have been substituted for bar.

It is the stitch upright part of the stitch on the row below that the crochet hook has to be taken around while working the single crochet on the neck of the swan.

By working the stitch in this manner, the chain loops on the top of the stitches are forced into the inside of the neck of the swan, which will give the crochet added firmness and in turn makes the neck remain in the upright position.

Many of you have consulted the picture of the swan, and I do agree with you that the crochet almost looks as though the neck has been worked lengthwise. But if you work the neck as I have described, the finished result does look exactly like the photograph. I have checked this particular query out myself.

By the way, I've been told I failed to give the pattern number when I suggested that you knit a gay Easter Bonnet for a friend, one that fits over the extra toilet roll for the bathroom. These instructions are on Leaflet No. 0369.

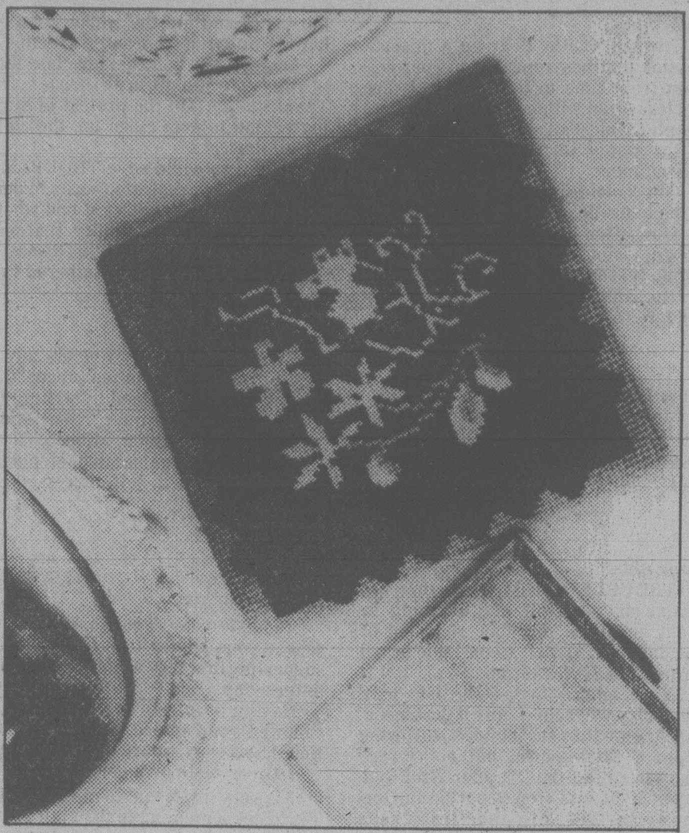
Once again I will give a simple basic idea for a knitted rug, one knitted entirely in garter-stitch and for which you can either use new wool, or use up the oddments which seem to collect over a period of time.

Basically, you make a two-inch strip of garter stitch, the number of stitches needed will depend on the wool or yarn being used. Most people have plenty of the double kinting or knitting worsted weight of wool and if you use it double in garter-stitch you will obtain a fairly firm finished fabric to the knitting. Cast on 10 stitches with No. 4 needles and continue working garter-stitch, being sure to change color on the right side only.

You can either make a round mat or oval by folding the strip in half, and for a circle sew the strip folded in half, around like a whirl. For an oval, you will need about 12 inches for the centre strip, then sew the knitting around this centre strip first one side then around and down the other, continuing until you have the desired size of mat.

These are great for the bedroom, bathroom (when made with synthetic yarn) and small hallways.

If you have never tried needlepoint, here is your chance to make a small piece as a trial, after which I'm sure you will want to work a larger piece. This little flower design work with Clark's Anchor Stranded Cotton can be fashioned into a compact cover, but I would love them as little coasters.



Never tried needlepoint? Try starting on these

When I spoke to the Canadian Embroiderers' Association in Banff last year, the ladies had worked one for each as a place card. I'm sure all the other guests treasure them as I do mine.

Half his stocks to wife

TORONTO (CP) — An estranged wife has been awarded half of her husband's stock by an Ontario Supreme Court judge based on her contribution to the marriage, the first time a spouse has been awarded a share of non-family assets.

Mr Justice John Holland awarded Barbara Leatherdale a $20,000 share of Bell Canada stocks held by her husband, Douglas Leatherdale, because of her indirect contributions to the marriage through her management of the home, care of the couple's son, and the pooling of her earnings as a bank employee during the six years she worked before quitting her job to stay home with their child.

"I attach no significance to the fact that the shares are in the husband's name alone," Holland said in a written decision. "His financial ability to acquire the shares (from his payroll deductions) was assisted by the wife's efforts inside and outside the home."

Holland said it was "fair and equitable" to give the wife an equal share.

Under the Family Law Reform Act there is no provision for equal sharing of non-family assets.

The Leatherdale's separated in 1978 after 19 years of marriage.

The husband is appealing the judgment.

Renting vehicle? Check it out first

for consumers

When this column advised travellers about customs regulations last year, a number of readers wrote for further information. One letter was from a group of young people who were about to take an extensive trip across Canada, then back through the United States.

Mike Barrette, Antonio Sino and Tony Jorge, all of Montreal, took a month-long odyssey in a rented recreational vehicle.

They took our advice about registering some items with Canadian Customs before leaving the country. Though U.S. border officials searched the vehicle, the return to Canada was smooth. Windsor officials were satisfied with their documents, and waved them right through.

They had some interesting comments about the problems of renting a recreational vehicle. The one they got hadn't been properly cleaned up before they took it.

An employee of the rental agent gave them a quick run down on using the various appliances. They were a little uneasy about the state of the vehicle, but in their excitement to be off, they overlooked the problems.

Too bad, because not long after, the transmission broke down, and the tires were so bald that mechanics and police advised them to replace them before they caused an accident. And one of the propane tanks couldn't be refilled owing to a faulty cap.

The company that rented the vehicle eventually paid for the repairs, and some expenses.

"The rental company wants you to have a good time and don't want you to have difficulty on the road because it costs them money and makes them look bad," wrote Mr. Barrette. "My only advice is not to be over-eager when picking up one of these things."

Good advice. Even with these problems, the fellows had a great time, and recommend the motor home as a way to travel and see the country. Unfortunately, their tendency to guzzle gas may keep most Canadians from taking advantage of that opportunity.

Being cautious about renting a vehicle applies to cars, too. You could end up paying for someone else's damages if you don't inspect the car first.

That's especially true if you have signed a blank charge form that has been imprinted with your credit card. While some companies will still take a cash deposit, of about $350, most now require that you sign the blank charge form as a deposit.

They don't trust you to pay for any damages you might cause, so they force you to give them — in effect — a blank cheque. Just in case.

Of course, you have to trust them to charge you the correct amount. If you drop off the car when the office is closed, so you can't watch them complete the form and figure your charges, they could goof, and you'll be the one who is out of pocket.

The time to ask questions about the company's policies is before you sign. Not when you get the bill.

Enquire about their 24 hours rule. How rigid is it? Some agents are lenient. If you bring the car back when the office is closed, and an hour or two over the 24 hour day, they'll only charge you for one day. But many others will bill you for the next day, too, or some part of it. Check.

Be sure you understand how the rates work. One favorite trick is to advertise a low rate, but only on certain sub-compact cars. When you arrive at the counter, there are none of those available. But they do have a slightly larger car, for a slightly higher rate, of course.

And special weekend rates may only apply to specific office locations. Or they may be picked up on a particular day and returned on another. There may be a three-day rental requirement.

dear abby

Dear Abby:

I would like to clear up a misconception that has appeared in your column from time to time. Animals are not less cruel within their species than people. Almost all animals fight fiercely for mates, territory and food, just like humans.

Ant colonies engage in warfare, often to the death, as do baboon tribes.

How often do we see a dog, unprovoked, viciously attacking another dog for no reason whatsoever?

No, Abby, civilization has brought a degree of civility over animals.

Biologist

Dear Biologist:

And don't forget the praying mantis. Immediately after mating, the female kills the male! How's that for a lovely "thank you"?

Dear Abby:

TROUBLED MOM wrote that her 8-year-old son will eat anything in sight, including dog food right out of the dog dish, as well as the stale bread thrown out for the birds.

Your advice to get the boy to a physician will help — only if the physician knows that the child is suffering from a little-known, but not-so-rare disease called the "Prader-Willi Syndrome." It was first reported in Germany in 1956, but the first cases in this country were not diagnosed in the U.S. until the 1960s.

Victims of the Prader-Willi Syndrome will eat themselves to death if allowed to. They don't care what they eat, and have been known to gorge on rotten apples, sticks of butter, garbage and entire loaves of bread. They become extremely obese and literally eat themselves into an early grave because of their bizarre eating marathons.

A Prader-Willi child in a mental institution was caught in the kitchen finishing a three-gallon jar of jam. Later, to discourage her, an attendant lacedone of the jars with a large amount of salt. The child disregarded the taste, and ate the whole jar anyhow, later dying from salt poisoning!

Another was in a cooking class that made a dozen pumpkin pies for Thanksgiving. On the pretext of staying behind to help clean up, the child ate all 12 pies!

Abby, you could save TROUBLED MOM years of frustrated visits to doctors and medical centres if you would alert her to the possibility that her child could be a victim of this disease.

The Mother of One

Dear Mother:

I heard from many readers advising me that information about this malady can be obtained by writing to: Prader-Willi Syndrome Association, 1515 Malibu Dr., Edina, Minn. 55436. It is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a reply.

Dear Abby:

About 16 years ago I asked you to repeat your advice to retired people, suggesting that they write one personal letter a day.

Having been retired for 20 years, I followed your advice, and I must say that it was worth more than I can say.

I am 86 and no longer drive, so the mail is very important to me. What fun it is to get something in the mail every day! And, of course, every letter is answered promptly.

In addition to my regular correspondence, my 140 Christmas cards (with a personal note on each one) brought me 120 replies. (I'll admit to four cards returned marked "Deceased," and five, "Address Unknown.")

It takes a little effort to write letters, but the rewards are beyond belief! My love,

George Kellogg

Dear George:

I'll underwrite that! Where would I be without letters?

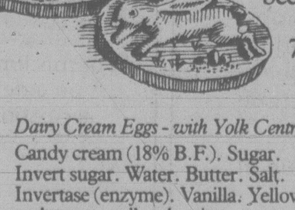
Purdy's gives the Easter Bunny a hand.



Easter means Purdy's own Chocolate Cameos, chocolate bunnies in all sizes, and most of all, Purdy's Easter Eggs. We've been making them the same way for over 70 years - like this:

Dairy Cream Eggs - with Yolk Centre
Candy cream (18% B.F.). Sugar. Invert sugar. Water. Butter. Salt. Invertase (enzyme). Vanilla. Yellow and orange yolk colouring.

Method:
Place 1 gal. of candy cream and the quart of water into a large polished copper kettle. Add all ingredients except the invertase and vanilla and begin cooking with fast fire, stirring constantly with wooden paddle. Wash down sides of kettle while boiling to prevent any sugar crystal formation. Turn down fire at 235°F and turn off as final temperature of 242°F is reached. Remove from fire and pour into the five foot diameter cast iron cream beater, (designed in 1902!). Cool to 105°F. Add invertase (enzyme) and vanilla. Start cream beater, creaming up the centre.

Remove ⅓ of the cream centre. Colour to a yolk colour. Divide remaining ⅔ into 2 parts. Place the 3 parts in the extruder hopper with the yellow part in the centre. Pull out the centre, creating the famous Purdy's yolk centred cream egg. Coat the eggs with Purdy's pure dark chocolate.

Easter Sunday is April 6.
But you could sample an egg early.

Power behind the groan

Jo-Ann Marshall is Canada's top female power-lifter

TORONTO (CP) — If most women were told they were built like a Sherman tank, a slap in the face would be in order, but from Jo-Ann Marshall, you get smiles.

That's because Canada's top female power-lifter will need every one of her 95 kilograms (210 pounds) to compete in the world weightlifting championships in May at Lowell University in Massachusetts.

And as long as she's happy, her husband Don is content too.

"It doesn't bother me at all that she's stronger than I am," he says. "We're really quite proud of her and will always support her."

It was the novelty of weightlifting that attracted Mrs. Marshall to the sport two years ago.

"I'm not a follower. I never worried about what people would think until I started this."

Now, while she has never received any direct insults, she is aware of the stereotype of female lifters as freaks.

"We want to keep our femininity," she says. "I wear more dresses now than I ever did."

The only woman lifter at the Olympia Club in Oshawa, Ont., where she trains, Mrs. Marshall says she's not out to prove herself better than the men.

"The biggest motivation is to see just how high I can go. The second thing is to see if anybody can beat it. If they do, I'll try harder. The trick is to compete against yourself."

Lifting, as she describes it, is an addiction, a communion of physical strength and mental determination. Becoming a champion is only a byproduct, though an important one.

"My father always told me it didn't matter what I did, as long as I did my best."

She works out five days a week. Three of them are spent lifting and the other two on exercising specific areas — arms, legs, stomach and back muscles.

The men at the club say Mrs. Marshall helps some of them with their own workouts. She fits right in, they say, and she holds them in the same high regard.

"Men in the U.S. really hassle the women. Our Canadian guys are really terrific."

She says she would like to see more women involved in the sport, which is relatively new to Canada.

Three lifts make up a competition: the squat, in which the lifter removes the bar from a stand, squats and stands straight; the bench press, in which the bar is lifted from the chest while the lifter is on her back; and the dead lift, in which the bar is lifted and pushed above the head. Mrs. Marshall's top total score in the three lifts is 487 kilograms (1,075 pounds).

Don Jamieson, president of the Canadian Powerlifting Union, says he thinks Mrs. Marshall will win the world championship. Coach Harry Norville is a little more cautious, but supportive all the same.

"She'll do very well. I'm not predicting that she'll win, but she's capable of doing that."

The best buy for your Easter dinner could be a really big bird. Turkey supplies are great and gobbling down prices. The least expensive Easter eggs aren't likely to be candy ones for sugar prices continue to climb. Chocolate duckies and bunnies may cost less if you buy melting chocolate and pour it into molds from cake and candy craft supply stores.

Did your Aunt Effie ever tell you that an Easter basket can become just as traditional as your own Christmas stocking? The same baskets were filled with Easter treats for two generations and are waiting now to be filled for a third generation.

Compost queries answered

jack beastall

An attempt is made today at answering some of the many questions received concerning composting and composting problems.

Worldwide publicity was given to massive production of compost in the state of Indore, India, in an attempt to make barren land arable. The Indore method was much too complicated for gardeners in the temperate zones of the world.

As a result, many gardeners discarded the idea of making their own humus, while others devised alternative methods to suit their particular plants and climate.

The basic rules for converting plant wastes to humus are simple. When the rules are followed, the actual method of applying them can vary considerably.

Plant parts contain cellulose which is difficult for soil organisms to break down.

The compost heap is designed rapidly to break down cellulose and enable the soil micro-organisms to decompose the wastes in a matter of months instead of years. Heat and moisture are essential to the quick disposal of the cellulose.

Heat is obtained by building the heap over the period of a day. When small quantities of wastes are added to a heap about once a week the necessary heat is not generated. This tells us why gardeners say their compost never seems to decompose to fine humus.

The next question deals with the proper way to build a heap from collected wastes and the often repeated instruction that each layer, and the sides and top, must be covered with a minimum of 5 centimetres (2 inches) of good soil.

This soil covering was needed in the climate of Indore, but is not essential here. In fact, the average gardener would be hard pressed to find enough good soil on an average city lot to cover a heap large enough to generate the needed heat.

Our purpose in using a little good soil is to inoculate the heap with the micro-organisms needed to break it down, so we always build the heap, whether in a box or in the open, on bare soil that has just been loosened with a fork. Never use a box with a wooden or concrete base.

The length of time needed to produce usable compost depends on the time of year, average temperatures, length of pieces of waste, and the rain or sprinkling the heap receives. A heap made in the fall should be usable the following spring; one made in the fall, by mid-summer. Time is reduced when all material is chopped or cut into pieces about 7.5 cm (3 inches) in length.

Place about 20 to 25 cm (8 to 10 inches) of chopped, well-mixed material on the soil, dust with 6-8-6 or a completely nitrogenous fertilizer followed by a dusting of good garden soil or some freshly pulled damp weeds with soil on the roots. Water well.

On the next layer apply a dusting of hydrated lime followed by good soil or freshly pulled weeds. The lime reduces the acids formed during decomposition and prevents objectionable odors. Water well. Continue the layers with alternate coverings, watering each layer thoroughly.

On a fall-built heap, fresh animal manure (cow or horse) can be substituted for the fertilizer, applying in a layer 5 cm (2 inches) thick. Fresh manure will start the heat cycle.

Dry or strawy material should be gently trampled to exclude some of the air. If green and wet, the compacting is not advised. If it is an open heap, the minimum size for good heating is 1.5 metres high, wide and long.

No soil covering is needed on an open heap or one in a box. The outer five cm of undecomposed material is removed and used as a base for the next heap while the under material is spread in the garden.

Two types of bacteria work on decomposing, one needing air (aerobic) and one which works inside (non-aerobic) which is killed when exposed to air. Therefore, all compost boxes should have at least 100 millimetres of space between boards, or ornamental blocks inserted in concrete-block bins for ventilation.

A heap built in one day as described above should have a temperature of 180° C. within 24 hours, or 48 at the most. Over the following five to seven days the heat will slowly decrease to around 30° C. and the heap will have dropped about half its original height.

The next question deals with a strong smell of sour vinegar when the heap is opened. This occurs when chicken or bird manures are used in quantity instead of animal manures.

For success with bird manures, spread to dry thoroughly, roll and crush to a powder, and dust alternate layers as done with fertilizer. Very little is needed in the heap because bird manures are high in nitrogen.

The final question is the failure to decompose when the wastes are mainly grass clippings.

Grass clippings, high in nitrogen and damp, generate terrific heat when left in a pile. This causes the clippings to fire-fang, or become covered with a white powdery substance that prevents further decomposition.

To succeed with grass clippings, spread each cut not more than 150 mm deep on bare soil and leave until thoroughly dry, about a week during summer. Then mix thinly with other wastes making sure no clumps of clippings get into the heap.

From April to late October, water heaps or boxes thoroughly every 10 days until fall rains take over. Leave winter heaps open to rain, in boxes or in the open. A covered heap should be kept well moistened through the winter.

Never put cooked foods to compost because micro-organisms cannot digest them, and they become attractions for cats, dogs, rats and mice. A straight heap of garden wastes never attracts animals as there are no odors of edible food.

The answers to the main questions about compost problems are covered in the above summary. Build each heap carefully, keep well-moistened.

Marigold 'victim' misled

A tenant's bid to prevent the Marigold Co-operative Housing Association from evicting her was refused in county court chambers Friday when the judge told the applicant she had been misled.

Judge M.L.T. Drake told Deilia Carley there were no merits to her application for an injunction.

He said that the association had done everything required of it by rules and statutes for co-operative organizations in seeking her eviction for being in rental arrears.

"I think you've been led into this by some people who don't have your interests at heart," Drake told the young woman, who represented herself.

Julian Greenwood, counsel for the co-operative and its manager William McElroy, told Drake the application was brought as part of a concerted effort by another person not present in the courtroom to attack the co-operative.

Greenwood said virtually all the material contained in the documents was written and signed by Lyndon Blow.

Drake recalled an application brought to chambers by Blow in February: "I told him two or three weeks ago he had no standing in this or similar matters," the judge said.

At the time Drake ruled Blow, who is not a lawyer and not a member of the co-operative asociation, had no right to bring the application for an injunction for overcharging tenant Debra Kim Wright.

Blow described himself as a retired test pilot.

Greenwood told Drake there have been five or six applications involving Marigold Co-operative that were vexatious and frivolous and an abuse of process.

He suggested the court assess costs against Blow.

Although it seemed apparent Blow's hand was in the matter brought by Carley, Drake told Greenwood if he wanted to proceed against Blow it would have be done separately.

Straith funeral Monday

Funeral services will be held in First United Church at 2 p.m. Monday for William T. Straith, a former provincial cabinet minister.

Straith, who died Friday at 85, was education minister and later provincial secretary in the Coalition government between 1947 and 1952. He had been Victoria MLA since 1937.

He retired from politics in 1953, one year after Social Credit came to power, and he returned to his law practice.

He continued to be active and was working in his law office two days before he died.

Born in Innerkip, Ont., of Scottish parents, Straith was the sixth of 10 children. His father was a United Church minister and Straith always expressed pride in being "a son of the manse."

He served overseas in the First World War as a stretcher-bearer.

A diligent, loyal worker, Straith surprised many people by crossing party lines in 1947 to support a CCF resolution condemning the government for not extending the franchise to Canadian-born Japanese. It was an expression of his life-long concern for human rights.

As education minister he travelled 25,000 miles a year around the province, many times over gravel roads.

He was active in the United Church and Kiwanis and was a member of a local discussion group called the Round Table. He also had been president of the Victoria YMCA.

He is survived by his wife, Christine, and daughters Mary Laurie of Victoria and Janet Stuart of Botswana.

Judge named

OTTAWA (UPC) — Justice Minister Jean Chretien Friday appointed former Quebec Court of Appeal Justice Antonio Lamer to fill the remaining post on the Supreme Court of Canada.

Lamer, former chairman of the Law Reform Commission, will immediately replace Supreme Court Justice Louis-Phillippe Pigeon, who retired in February.

Doctors counted

CHICAGO (AP) — There are 187 physicians for every 100,000 people in the United States — which means about one physician for every 535 people, the American Medical Association says.

PCs don't want fall convention

OTTAWA (CP) — Most Progressive Conservatives who have replied to a query from their president say they don't want a national convention until next year.

The response is a rebuff to party leader Joe Clark who said after the Tory defeat in the Feb. 18 election that he wants to remain as leader but wants a vote of confidence from a convention he hoped would be this fall.

National president Robert Coates sent about 2,000 letters to Conservatives asking if they wanted a fall meeting or wanted to wait until next year. Coates said he would propose a motion of confidence in Clark.

A spokesman in Coates' office said today that about 100 replies have been received and they run four to one in favor of a meeting next year and almost all express support for Clark.

He said the party might expect a total return of about 300 letters to a mailing of 2,000.

But he said a single letter can speak for a group of Conservatives. For instance, Alex Geddes of Toronto spoke for 23 Metro Toronto constituency associations when he said there should be no convention until next year.

Reasons for the delay vary from cost — the party has had the expense of two elections within a year — to the fact that many believe a fall convention would be a one-issue meeting.

Coates has said he supports the latter view. He says if Tories meet in the fall all there will be to discuss is leadership. If the party waits until next year, he says, Liberal policies will be developed enough for Conservatives to prepare a response.

The party's 30-person executive committee will decide on a convention date later this spring.

SHAPE UP FOR SPRING WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET
In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.
Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.
The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.
Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:
Vitamin A, Thiamin, Choline, Iodine, Potassium
Vitamin E, Riboflavin, Calcium, Magnesium, Manganese
Vitamin C, Niacin B6, B12, Phosphorous, Copper, Sodium
Vitamin D, Folid Acid Blotin, Iron, Zinc, d-Panothenic Acid
This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.
The no nonsense diet is available at these and other leading dealers:

Western mayors seeking control from Ottawa

CALGARY (UPC) — The mayors of western Canada's major cities demanded local control of Canadian international airports, improved housing incentives and beefed-up prostitution laws Friday.

With Vancouver mayor John Volrich acting as spokesman, the mayors of Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon and Regina called on the new federal cabinet to hold meetings in the three western provinces, which election no Liberals to Parliament.

Volrich said the mayors agreed the federal goverment should move quickly to reintroduce housing assistance programs to alleviate the "volatile market" in western Canada.

The proposals were the result of a morning session attended by mayors Ross Alger of Calgary, Cec Purves of Edmonton, Cliff Wright of Saskatoon and Larry Schneider of Regina.

The mayors called for immediate action to amend the Criminal Code to stem the tide of prostitution in the region, especially in Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

The two Alberta cities and Vancouver have experienced an upsurge in prostitution and police have complained that laws pertaining to soliciting are not strong enough.

Volrich said the mayors will also press Ottawa for more federal funding for mass transit and the elimination of taxes on transit vehicles.

He accused the ministry of transport of "a lack of concern for the cities in western Canada."

The mayors said they want the administration of international airports controlled by local commissions and asked the federal government to turn over control of the port of Vancouver.

"The commissions must have decision-making power, We don't want to have to go to Ottawa for approval for every minute expenditure," Volrich said.

Volrich said the federal gvernment "can't afford to ignore the mayors of five major cities in western Canada ... these are the cities where the growth is."

Imported media termed threat

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Electronics technology from outside the country may have dire effects on both Canadian culture and the economy unless Canadian political leaders act soon, two worried experts say.

This week, Alphonse Ouimet and Eric Manning delivered the last two of this year's Walter Gordon Lectures on the theme, "The Computerized Society: Implications for Canada."

Ouimet is former president of the CBC and board chairman of Telesat Canada, a national space communications satellite agency. Manning is a professor of computer science from the University of Waterloo.

Ouimet said Canadians now spend 75 per cent of television viewing time watching U.S. shows.

"Since television in itself is by far the most important cultural activity of Canadians, it would be difficult not to conclude that watching American programs constitutes our most important cultural activity."

If Canadians want to maintain their unique identity it is important for this country to deliver its cultural message to its people

To achieve a goal within 10 years of having half of all televisions in Canada tuned to domestic programming, Canadian cable systems may have to supply up to 10 additional Canadian channels carrying specialized shows.

A NATION IN CHAOS NEEDS OUR HELP!

Now is the time to express your concern, your love and your compassion to what remains of a nation reduced to less than five million people - most facing starvation or disease within the next three months.

World Vision has been recognized by the new Khmer government and was granted permission last November to open an office in Phnom Penh, Cambodia's "ghost-like" capital city.

Supplies are getting through. And World Vision staff is on hand to supervise their distribution.

The immediate needs are to:
1) Provide hospital equipment, medicines and medical supplies
2) Commence a program of caring for 500,000 orphaned children.
3) Maintain food shipments and supply basic agricultural equipment.

Nurse aide charged in thefts

TORONTO (CP) — A nurse's aide has been arrested for stealing rings worth about $7,000 from the fingers of dying patients in Queen Elizabeth Hospital, police said.

An investigation began two months ago when relatives of 87-year-old Ann Wainstein complained that she had been robbed of two wedding bands worth $1,500 while she lay unconscious in the hospital for the terminally ill.

Police said the relatives told them the rings must have been yanked off because her ring fingers were scratched and bruised.

Police, who later learned that other patients had lost rings, brooches and cash, said most of the stolen articles were recovered.

Irma Gloria Francis, 36, has been charged with six counts of theft and five counts of possessing stolen jewelry.

Archeologist dead

HALIFAX (CP) — Prince John Loewenstein, an internationally-known anthropologist and archeologist, died in a Halifax hospital Thursday. He was 79.

A native of Munich, eldest son of the late Prince Maximilain zu Loewenstein and Baroness Constance Pirbright, Loewenstein came to Halifax in 1959 to teach anthropology and archeology at Saint Mary's University. He served on the staff until his retirement in 1977. He travelled widely and was engaged in archeological field work in Europe and Asia.

Loewenstein studied at University of Vienna and University of London. Many of his works in archeology have been published in English, German and French.

Loewenstein, a fellow of the Royal Anthropological Institue of Great Britain and Ireland, served as a translator-announcer for the British Broadcasting Corp. during the Second World War and was appointed curator of the Raffles Museum in Singapore following the war.

UN grades world cities for expenses

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — Sixty-five cities of the world, including Paris and London, are more expensive than New York City for the foreign visitor, with Kinshasa, Zaire, topping the list issued Tuesday by the United Nations.

Indexing New York, where the UN has its headquarters, at 100, the list put Kinshasa at 177, Geneva at 173, Manama (Bahrain) at 155, Bonn, 154, Tokyo and Kampala, Uganda, 153, Brussels, 150, Sanaa, Yemen, 149, The Hague, Copenhagen and Abidjan, Ivory Coast, 147, and Paris, 144. London was at 119.

East, West as one

Julian and Gregorian calendars coincide this year, so Christians of both Eastern and Western persuasions will celebrate Easter simultaneously next weekend.

Eastern rites depict removal of Christ from the cross at 3 p.m. Good Friday and his reposal in the tomb. A representation of the Holy Shroud is laid in a symbolic tomb in the church, says Father Gleb Jensen of Holy Theophany Orthodox Church, 3801 Cadboro Bay Road.

Friday at 8 p.m., a burial procession proceeds around the church with the Holy Shroud.

On Easter eve, just before midnight, the shroud is taken back to the altar.

The service ends 2:30 or 3 a.m., when baskets of food are blessed for breakfast, which includes colored eggs, Easter bread, cheese and meat.

Cathedral setting for TV religion chronicles

Christ Church Anglican cathedral is the venue for Meeting Place, the Sunday morning CBC television program on church services from different denominations across Canada.

This Easter program sets out to portray the events of Holy Week through the medium of the Liturgy.

CBC will film all the services in the cathedral on Maundy Thursday (8 p.m.), Good Friday (10 a.m.) and Easter Eve (11 p.m.) select scenes that tell the story of salvation, and present them in an hour-long program on Sunday.

Good Friday worship begins at 10 a.m. with the Stations of the Cross.

The service begins at noon, the time of the Crucifixion, and lasts until 3 p.m. when Jesus died. It features responsive reading of the passion narrative by priests and congregation.

The Eucharist is not celebrated from Thursday night until Easter.

Saturday at 11 p.m. the church is in darkness. Outside, everyone receives a candle as they prepare to meet the Risen Lord. The Easter Fire is struck, the Paschal Candle is lighted, and taken into the church, followed by choir and people, all with candles lit.

The church gradually comes alive with candlelight. Then follows the Liturgy of the Word. As the Resurrection approaches, new members of the church are born again in Baptism, and the first Eucharist of Easter takes place in a blaze of light and joyful bursts of music, ending with the singing of the Easter hymn Jesus Christ is Risen Today.

AN UNUSUAL Good Friday service with the sanctuary choir and lay readers will be held at Metropolitan United Church on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

It depicts Christ's passion and death in music and scripture with the sanctuary beautifully lit with candles. As the service comes to a close, the light is extinguished and darkness prevails awaiting the dawning of Easter Day.

CENTRAL BAPTIST Church, 833 Pandora, will host a group of young people on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. who form the Mizo Choir from Northern India.

Visiting Victoria under the auspices of the Christian Nationals Evangelism Commission, this choir represents a fantastic phenomena in missions today.

These people were headhunters 85 years ago and now they are the most literate people in India, as well as being 95 per cent Christian.

They will be here to share their concern for their nation India, where 600 million people are without Christ. Public is invited.

PALM SUNDAY liturgy will be celebrated Sunday at the 1:30 p.m. mass of Saint Athanasius' Anglican Church, meeting at Grace Lutheran Church, 1273 Fort.

The complete ancient Western rite, including festal procession of palms and the Passion, will be sung by Saint Gregory Singers, all to the traditional Gregorian plainsong.

Saint Gregory Singers specialize in music for men's voices from the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, including Gregorian chant.

The singers will also sing the liturgy on Good Friday at 2 p.m., Holy Saturday, the Easter Vigil at 10 p.m., and Easter Day 1:30 p.m. at Saint Athanasius.

AFTER YEARS of planning and much commitment on the part of members and friends of Knox Presbyterian Church at 2964 Richmond, a new multi-purpose church hall, fully equipped for the handicapped, will be dedicated at a special service at 3 p.m. Sunday. Friends are invited to the special service, open house and fellowship.

A PROGRAM of festive music for Easter, Declare His Honor, will be presented by the Senior Choir of St. Aidan's United Church on Sunday, April 6, at 3 p.m. under the direction of Mary Copland. It will include Purcell's verse anthems Rejoice in the Lord Always, Declare His Honor and Handel's Messiah, Part III. There is no admission charge, but a collection will be taken. St. Aidan's is at 1691 Broadmead, off Cedar Hill Cross Road.

RODNEY WEBSTER will conduct the Victoria Choral Society together with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart program on April 7 at 8 p.m. in the Royal Victoria Theatre. The concert will conclude Webster's year as guest conductor with the society. Tickets may be obtained at Hillside Mall, Mayfair Mall, Memorial Arena and the Brandywine, Colwood.

THE EASTER cantata The Glory of Easter by John Petersen will be given by the combined voices of Victoria and Sidney Seventh-day Adventist church choirs, next Saturday at 11 a.m. at the Victoria church, 983 Pandora. The public is welcome to share the message of the Easter season.

THE 56-VOICE Canadian Union College singers, of Lacombe, Alberta, under Wendolin Lee Pazitka, will present a sacred choral concert at Victoria Seventh-day Adventist Church, 983 Pandora, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Included will be an original composition by the director, along with other pieces from the group's latest recording, Choral Prayer for Peace. Admission to the concert is free but a freewill offering will be received.

ST. MATTHIAS' Anglican Church will end this year's Lent with a celebration of Lenten music. Choirs and musicians will combine for the performance on Palm Sunday, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Matthias, 600 Richmond. Featured work is the Faure Requiem, performed by the 35-voice St. Matthias' Choir with soloists. There is no admission charge, and the public is invited.

Freight rates not enough, says grain man

BRANDON (CP) — The president of Manitoba Pool Elevators upset several farmers attending a grain marketing seminar when he said railways are not being paid enough to move grain from the prairies to port.

Jim Deveson said the statutory freight rate paid to the railways "has given them no incentive to provide equipment or the service that's needed to do the kind of job we want done."

Tony Riley, a farmer from Strathclair, Man., challenged Deveson's statement.

He said the federal government isn't pressing the railways to provide service to farmers as required under the Railway Act.

Deveson, he said, wasn't looking after the interest of farmers.

Fred Harrison of Rocanville, Sask., was another who questioned Deveson's remarks.

"Until we have a guarantee of service, I'm not willing to pay more as a farmer in railway freight charge," Harrison said.

But Deveson replied that getting "more service from the railways at the same rate is not an option."

"I think the railways have done a reasonably good job, although they don't have enough rail cars," the pool president said.

14,000 new jobs?

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Booming economic development in the 1980s could mean up to 14,000 new jobs in the Medicine Hat region by 1988, provincial government analysts say. Economist Greg Jones, who works for the department's planning secretariate, said 46,000 persons could be employed in the Medicine Hat-Brooks area towards the end of the decade. Direct employment in the petroleum industry in southeastern Alberta could increase to 2,150 persons by 1988 from 1,400 now.

Bigger stakes

CALGARY (CP) — Gamblers will be able to win or lose more at the Calgary Stampede casino this summer. Don Weldon, casino and lotteries manager with the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede, said permission has been received from the provincial government to operate 10 high-roller blackjack tables with minimum and maximum bets of $5 and $100 respectively. The maximum bet was $50. However, plans to introduce Keno, a popular Nevada game, at this year'e Stampede have been shelved for a year.

Pot reformer firm

BRANDON (CP) — Larry Bagby, an American-born university student, says he won't give up his fight to reform Canada's marijuana laws even if it means being deported. Bagby is the 25-year-old Arkansas native who set up a picket line outside the Brandon correctional institute to protest police reluctance to put him behind bars for a marijuana conviction. After he entered jail, he was granted an absence period to attend univiersity clases each day. He will be released April 18 after his conviction last Dec. 26 for possession of marijauna. A local immigration official said Bagby's status is being reviewed in view of his marijuana conviction. Casses of landed immigrants who are convicted of a crime are always reviewed.

Skeleton dug up

EDMONTON (CP) — A skeleton found by a workman at a downtown construction site is that of a 12 to 15-year-old Indian or Metis boy, Dr. Jennifer Rice, Alberta deputy chief medical examiner, said. "It's not a recent death," she said. "These are old bones and they've been buried a long time." But an examination of the bones did not reveal any injury that caused death. "Nobody shot him through the head with an arrow." She said further studies of the find will be carried out by a local anthropologist to determine the length of time the bones have been buried and to confirm the results of the preliminary examination.

Dogs jump fence

HINES CREEK, Alta. (CP) — An area farmer said a pack of five dogs jumped a corral fence on his farm and killed four goats. The farmer wants the fish and wildlife department to investigate. Harvey Hartwig, owner of the farm 132 kilometres north of Grande Prairie, said three goats were killed initially in the Feb. 24 attack and one died later from injuries.

A totally new concept in camping!

HOW TO TEACH AN OLD HOG NEW TRICKS.

If fuel costs are driving you crazy, help yourself.

And save up to $500 a year.

Whether you own a spanking new Rabbit, or a '57 Ford, you car's mileage can be improved dramatically through regular maintenance and proper driving habits. They can make a big difference in our energy consumption, and your pocketbook.

More than 17 million barrels of oil are consumed by private cars in British Columbia every year.

And it's getting worse.

While Americans decreased their gas consumption by 11% in 1979, we increased ours by almost 7%.

In short, our neighbours to the south are heading in the right direction. And we aren't.

FUEL FOR THOUGHT.

Even after major technological advances, your brain is still the best energy saving device your car has.

To demonstrate how we can all be more fuel efficient, the British Columbia Ministry of Energy, Mines and Petroleum Resources organized Operation Tune-Up.

With the co-operation of Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, and the B.C.A.A., Operation Tune-Up asked twelve media personalities to demonstrate the savings made possible through a change in driving habits, and car maintenance.

The ordinary gas mileage of each car and driver was determined. Then, after a thorough mechanical tune-up, and two hours of instruction on how to drive for fuel efficiency, each participant put his new-found knowledge on the road. Gas mileage was then recorded for one week.

Nicole Parton of the Vancouver Sun improved her compact car's mileage by 20%.

Phil Roberts of CJOR increased the mileage of his late model North American car by 33.8%. Almost $500 a year in fuel savings.

Even though most of the cars in Operation Tune-Up were smaller, more efficient models, the average improvement in gas mileage was a healthy 15.4%.

And how did they do it? With a little common sense and these simple driving habits that apply to all cars, and every driver in British Columbia.

THE ANTI-GUZZLE GLOSSARY.

Maintain your car. A tune-up twice a year will ensure that your car operates at peak efficiency.

In this age of self-serve gas stations, remember to check under the hood for oil, fluid and water levels every other fill-up.

Check fan belt tension and tire pressure once a month. Under-inflated tires can be a real drag on your car's performance.

Follow the instructions in your owner's manual for regular servicing.

Avoid "Jack Rabbit" starts. Operate your accelerator smoothly. Pretend there's an egg between your foot and the gas pedal, and a glass of water on the dash. If you continually break the egg, and spill the water, you're making a mess of your fuel economy.

Watch traffic well ahead. Slow down way before you reach a red light. Why hurry up and wait, when the light could turn green before you come to a complete stop?

Slow down. Especially on the highway. When you go fast, so does our gasoline supply. You can travel 25% farther at 80 km/h than you can at 110 km/h.

Don't rest your foot on the brake pedal. It's dangerous, damaging, and forces your engine to work harder for no reason.

Reduce warm-up times. Start driving after 30 seconds, or sooner. Your car will warm up more quickly, and you'll be using that gas to go places, instead of just sitting there. Also, turn off the engine if you're stopped for any reason longer than one minute.

Don't store heavy items in the trunk. Nowadays, there's no such thing as a free ride, even for your golf clubs.

Remove roof racks when not in use. They dramatically increase wind resistance.

Avoid traffic jams. Sometimes more easily said than done. But if you leave a bit earlier, or later, you'll be surprised how much less waiting you'll have to put up with. Pay attention to traffic reports and take alternate routes.

Drive less. Walk more. And use your bike, public transportation and car pools whenever possible. There's less wear and tear on your car, and your nerves.

Plan ahead. Short trips for little errands are made on cold, fuel hungry engines. The more trips you combine into one, the more you save.

Know exactly where you're going, and how to get there. Don't waste your energy driving around in circles.

LET'S GET IN THE HABIT OF SAVING GAS.

If every British Columbian followed the examples of Operation Tune-Up we'd improve our gas mileage by at least 15%. Sure, it could cost you a few extra minutes a day, but aren't they worth the hundreds of dollars a year you'll save?

WE DON'T MAKE OIL, WE FIND IT.

And it's getting harder to find every year. The cost of gasoline is going up, but if you follow these rules, so will your savings.

Keep these driving habits in mind and your car will be more reliable.

We'll have less automobile pollution.

And more gasoline to go around, for all of us.

OPERATION TUNE-UP COULD SAVE US 91.6 MILLION GALLONS OF GASOLINE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA, IN ONE YEAR.

Infant-in-car safety law first

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Friday became the first province in Canada to introduce automobile restraints regulations for very young children.

Under the new regulations children born after June 30 this year will have to use safety seats when travelling in automobiles, although there are limited exceptions.

The new regulations will not affect out-of-province automobiles nor children born before June 30 who are under the age of five years or who weigh less than 50 pounds.

The province's existing legislation requires all persons over the age of five or weighing more than 50 pounds to wear seat belts in the front seat of automobiles.

The regulations are not applied to children under five or weighing 50 pounds or less because the province has been unable to get a consensus on whether restraints do more good than damage in the form of internal injuries in such cases.

The Saskatchewan regulations allow for the use of normal, adult seat belts for children born after June 30 who weigh between 20 and 40 pounds, when safety seats are not available — in cases such as taxis, rental vehicles or when transporting other parents' children. Taxis and rental vehicles are exempt from the regulations when transporting infants weighing less than 20 pounds.

The regulations recommend three types of seats — rear-facing infant carriers for children less than 20 pounds and child safety seats or convertible seats for those weighing 20-40 pounds.

Bill Sheard, chairman of the Highway Safety Board, said the new regulations don't affect children born before June 30 who don't come under the existing regulations because the safety seats of that size are not readily available.

No penalties have been mentioned for disobeying the regulations and Sheard said that for the first six months police will not issue tickets — only warnings.

Transportation Minister Eiling Kramer said he expects opposition to the initial purchasing of the seats which cost between $25 and $70. But he suggested the seats can be passed around among family and friends.

The new regulations do not affect vehicles without the seating space to install child safety seats or seat belts. "The intent isn't to force families to buy new, bigger cars just to fit the kids," an official said.

Also exempt from the regulations are older model vehicles with no seat belts in the rear seat.

Crushed by waste

TANIMA, Japan (AP) — A limestone waste heap, loosened by an overnight storm, thundered down a slope onto two house below, killing a family of five and injuring a neighbor, police said.

GREATER VICTORIA PUBLIC LIBRARY

Before the judge

A 53-year-old Victoria man was ordered by Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Friday to begin 30 weekends of an intermittent jail term next weekend.

Edward Rypstra, of 528 Tait, pleaded guilty to indecent assault on a male and was given a 90-day, intermittent sentence and ordered to continue psychiatric counselling.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said the incident involved an 11-year-old friend of Rypstra's son.

The three had gone to Calgary for a holiday with the consent of the victim's parents when Rypstra committed an indecent act on July 19, 1979.

The judge said the case was made worse by the fact Rypstra shamelessly solicited the boy by offering money for further sex.

The prime considerations, the judge said, had to be the protection of the public and deterence.

A 24-year-old man was charged with trafficking in hashish Aug. 30 in Esquimalt.

Dalton William Lake, of 1337 Saunders, elected trial by judge without jury and had a preliminary hearing set for Sept. 5.

Judge Lorne Pearce added 48 hours of community service work to an intermittent sentence being served by a 20-year-old Salt Spring Island man.

Henry William Pickering pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail last Saturday.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Pickering was given a 60-day sentence Jan. 26 by Judge Fred Green for assault causing bodily harm but was allowed to serve it on weekends.

Pickering failed to report as ordered at 8 a.m.

Defence lawyer Steven Kelliher said Pickering turned himself in to the RCMP on Salt Spring Island on Monday.

Kelliher said his client was ill on Friday and decided to take the 6:20 a.m. ferry to Swartz Bay on Saturday rather than a Friday ferry as planned.

However, Pickering was so sick he slept through his alarm and decided to wait until Monday to do something about it.

Kelliher asked Pearce to consider the six weekends Pickering has already served without difficulty.

Pearce suspended the passing of sentence, placed Pickering on two months probation, and ordered the community work.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Edmund Grant Guillett, 41, of 2413 Bette Drive, $450; and William Thomas MacDonald, 27, of 2942 Leigh Road, $350.

Tel picks woman

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first woman to be elected to the board of directors of British Columbia Telephone Co. says she will bring a consumer's point of view to the post.

Rendina Hamilton, a Kelowna lawyer, was elected at the company's annual meeting Thursday to replace Harry Boyce, who retired after a 42-year association with B.C. Tel, 37 years as a director.

Her point of view is that of a consumer from a smaller Interior town, she said.

New York Times

NEW YORK — "I'll bet you know a few funny things, don't you?"

Peter Sellers nodded politely. The other man at the dinner party persevered.

"What was that thing I saw you in? It was — can't think of the name of it now. You played the part of a — what the hell was it, I can't remember what you played. What was it?"

Sellers said he'd made a lot of films, and didn't know which one the man meant. His answer somehow left the man annoyed.

"Well, I KNOW that, but this film — well, my wife, it was one of her favorites. And you played a man in it. A man who was a — good Lord! I know the one! You played a bloody wog!"

"You don't mean The Party, do you?" politely asked Sellers, who appeared as a bumbling Indian in that film.

"Oh, I don't know it by name, but you were in America, and there were a lot of people there, Americans. And you went 'round, bloody wog you were, messing things up for them! My wife says she laughed a lot at that. I didn't see it. Was it good?"

"Well, it didn't do particularly well. It was an underappreciated little film," Sellers replied.

"I see. Do you do a lot of films like that? I mean, where you play things that aren't appreciated?"

Peter Sellers paused, and so did his friend at the dinner table, and then they were both laughing. This was no coincidence, because Sellers had been acting both roles, doing a marvelous bit of mimicry as he carried on a complete conversation with himself. He did this from time to time, always hilariously, during the course of a recent interview. He was in New York to discuss Being There, in which he stars, giving a performance that may win him an Academy Award as best actor.

"I think it would be very nice to have an Oscar," he said hesitantly, "whatever that means. The film is good, and if it doesn't win, it's still good. I've got other things that have been given to me in other countries. I won the British one once, and nearly had a heart attack picking it up." He will be at work in London on Oscar night, April 14, editing a new film, The Fiendish Plot of Dr. Fu Manchu.

Because heart trouble is a very real danger for the 54-year-old Sellers — he has had a number of heart attacks, the most recent one last year — he seems to take a fairly relaxed attitude toward his work. But when he is on the job, Sellers is known as demanding. "I have a bit of a name for being difficult," he said, "but I'm not difficult at all. It's just that, having worked with someone like Stanley Kubrick or people like that, I just can't stand amateurism in a job where professionalism is absolutely No. 1.

It was Sellers's mother, an actress, who instilled this attitude. "My mother used to say, 'Never ask a person to do a job you can't do yourself,' and so I've done every job in the theater," he said. Sellers's mother also told him that green was an unlucky color. And Vittorio de Sica, for whom he once worked, had a similar aversion to purple. Accordingly, neither Sellers's room, at the Hotel Carlyle, nor anyone visiting him, was decked out in either shade.

Still, he maintained cheerfully that he isn't more than mildly superstitious. "I don't think either of those colors would kill me, I just don't want anything bad to happen at that particular moment."

"Beside," he continued, "I know that I shall die when I'm age 75, in my sleep. A long time ago, when I was 17, an Irish nurse read tea leaves. Everything she has ever said to me has come true — everything. She told me about my whole career, and at the time it all went in one ear and out the other. Except when things started to happen, they were always the things she had said.

Sellers himself has been less accurate in his own predictions about life. "When I was young, I wanted to have a great lovely family life. I wanted to be married to one woman who really cared for me, although I already recognized that it doesn't work that way if you marry an actress. It doesn't work because you travel all over the place, and all sorts of things can go wrong.

Even so, he has married four actresses, one of whom, Britt Ekland, has lately garnered some publicity by including a nasty portrait of Sellers in her memoirs. (Load of muck," said Sellers, of the forthcoming book.) Miss Ekland was 19 when the 38-year-old Sellers married her; his present wife, Lynne Frederick, is 26."I seem to marry young people," he said. "I never grew up, you see — I'm still the same idiot I was at 18 or 20."

The magic of Kim Cattrall

Gossip Columnist helped put Vancouver Island's Kim Cattrall firmly in public eye

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The last three years have been filled with many plump TV and film roles for Kim Cattrall.

But the 23-year old actress from Comox feels nevertheless, that in one sense those years have sidetracked her original and still firmly held goal — to make her career on the legitimate stage.

From support appearances to starring roles, she has had few idle moments since signing a contract with Universal Studios in 1977.

This week Kim was seen on television screens all over the country as The Gossip Columnist.

At the moment she is in Toronto where Bernard Slade's Tribute is being filmed. She is playing a lead role — Slade calls it "the perfume of the piece" — with Jack Lemmon and a cast that includes Lee Remick and Colleen Dewhurst.

Kim, British born, grew up on Vancouver Island, graduating at 17 from Vanier Secondary School. Her theatrical instincts were given their first encouragement at the age of 10 when she was awarded a scholarship to attend the V.I.Summer School of the Arts at Courtenay.

In a telephone interview, Kim, 13 when first interviewed by the Times 10 years ago, was as candid and clear of vision, as pragmatically artistic as on that early occasion.

She agreed with the assessment that many people have been making: this latest major role with a star-studded cast has placed her precisely on the threshold of becoming herself, an established star.

"It has seemed a roundabout route," she says, "but I now realize it's better to get launched through films and television than to take the slow, circuitous method of haunting Broadway for one-line bit parts and walk-ons, hoping for the big break."

At this point she feeis she can look with some assurance at the possibility of stage roles: "If you make a name they are likely to come to you rather than the other way round."

So far Canada's west coast and other regional theatres have made no moves to engage her since 1977. That year she got good reviews for her performance in Toronto Free Theatre's Me?

Kim says things are going exceptionally well with the shooting of Tribute. She's enjoying the role, so different to her recent unpleasant and hardboiled character in the TV mini-series, Scruples.

"Jack Lemmon is a jewell to work with — the ladies too, Remick and Dewhurst. You know Dewhurst told our class at the Academy (American Academy of Dramatic Art) 'I wouldn't be where you kids are for the world; you've got a rough, difficult road ahead.' And now here I am in a film with her."

The hazel-eyed slender 5'7" actress first surfaced in Victoria in the speech arts classes of the Music Festival. Already in pursuit of her goal, she had entered in the speech sections of several festivals and come out a consistent winner. The Victoria adjudicator was profoundly impressed and the Times wrote: "mere marks cannot convey the impression this exceptionally talented girl has made . . . she creates character and mood from some source deep within herself . . . those who have watched her over the last two days know that in her there is potential far beyond the usual."

Kim studied the basic things — music, ballet, voice. She spent some time at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and the required two years in New York at the American Academy. She was one of the youngest students ever to be accepted there (an honor shared with Anne Bancroft) and on graduation was described by a teacher as "the most fantastic kid ever to come out of the Academy."

One of the things that was apparent from the beginning was that Kim had that indispensable capacity, the ability and the will to work. She possessed the kind of determination and zeal that pushes down barriers by sheer grit.

Without that inner fire, natural talent has no wings to carry it to the heights.

She is frank about her capacity. "It's served me well," she says. "All the preliminary things I worked so hard at in my teens — my Royal Conservatory of Music and London Academy diplomas — they've been a substantial help."

Asked about her reaction with regard to the media promotion she has received, she replies: "Well, not entirely happy. My feelings are mixed. Like many people, I've been mis-quoted from time to time. But I think I've made a few mistakes myself.

"You need to be quite careful in this area and I'm still pretty green at it."

Kim was "disappointed" in the item concerning her that appeared in the March 24 Macleans.

She didn't like it because as an excerpt from a full interview it's single dimension resulted in some distortion. "I've had a lot of good parts. The Macleans item infers that until my role in Tribute I've played nothing but rotten characters like the one in Scruples."

"By the way," she says, "the press in Hollywood were very much upset at the preview of The Gossip Columnist. They said it should never have been aired!"

Kim, typically, is being tagged in eastern papers as a 'Toronto' actress. True, she has worked in her profession in Toronto and never had the opportunity to do so in Victoria. But she herself is loyal to her Vancouver Island heritage.

"I owe so much to so many people there, including my supportive family."

Shooting of Tribute will move to New York soon, but when it is complete there will be time for a holiday and Kim says she will be on the first plane heading for the west coast.

"Maybe one day it will be to play in a Victoria production."

Little Tramp's little statue creates furore

LONDON (AP) — Charlie Chaplin may have been born and raised here, but some Londoners oppose a city plan to put up a life-size statue of the Little Tramp in the motion picture centre of Leicester Square.

The situation comes to a head today when the Westminster district planning committee decides the statue's fate.

"Chaplin was a Communist who never did a thing for this country or for America," said Irene Wolfe, leader of a petition drive that has collected 47 signatures.

Nicholas Thompson, Chaplin's chief opponent on the planning committee, claims the actor "doesn't deserve" such a prominent site, even though he was knighted in 1975.

Thompson is annoyed that the likeness of the baggy-panted, cane-twirling Little Tramp would be within gazing distance of a statue of another famous Briton — William Shakespeare.

"It is objectionable to have Charlie Chaplin next door to Shakespeare," Thompson said Wednesday. "Leicester Square should be reserved only for great men, and Chaplin was not a great man."

A year ago, the Charlie Chaplin Statue Committee commissioned British sculptor John Doubleday to do the statue. The $18,700 price of the statue was raised by a public appeal for small contributions "from ordinary people."

Chaplin, son of a music hall singer, was born in 1889 in London's rundown Southwark district near the River Thames. His father died three years later, leaving the family almost penniless.

Chaplin made his acting debut at five, and within two years was helping put food on the family table by strutting across British stages.

He left Britain to seek his fortune in America in 1910 and never returned to live here because of his bitter childhood. He became a millionaire several times over.

Ringed by movie houses, Leicester Square has a small park at its centre dotted with statues. When the site was proposed, Miss Wolfe began her petition drive this month.

At issue are charges about Chaplin's politics in America's tense Communist-hunting days of the Cold War. In 1947, Congress' House of Representatives committee on un-American activities suggested he was a Communist — a charge Chaplin denied.

But U.S. authorities revoked Chaplin's entry permit in 1952 and the actor, still a British citizen, went to Swizerland to live. He died at his home there on Christmas Day, 1977. He was 88.

In 1978, Chaplin's coffin was stolen from the cemetery at Corsier-Sur-Vevey, Switzerland. It was recovered near an open cornfield at Noville, 16 kilometres away, 10 weeks after it disappeared.

The body-snatchers, two East Europeans, were caught when police trapped one of them in a Lausanne phone booth while negotiating for a $600,000 ransom with the Chaplin family lawyer. One was sentenced to 4½ years in prison, the other received a suspended sentence.

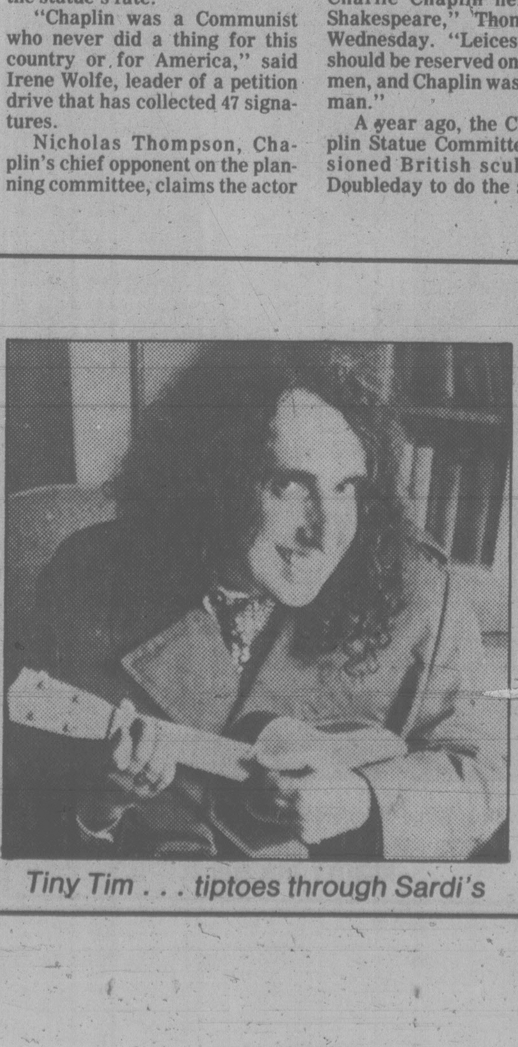
Ken Taylor, Canada's ambassador to Iran who masterminded the escape of six Americans from Tehran last month, will present a hall of fame award at the Juno music industry awards ceremony April 2. The special award was first presented two years ago to honor distinguished Canadian musicians.

Even luncheon at New York's famous Sardi's wasn't enough this week to shake Tiny Tim loose from one of his more cherished peculiarities. Old friend Robert Lansing invited him, not realizing that Tim, of Tiptoe Through the Tulips fame, never — but never — eats in public. He showed up, but scorned Sardi's famous menu, asking instead that four sandwiches be packed in a doggy bag for consumption later, when no one was watching.



Tiny Tim . . . tiptoes through Sardi's

Bob Dylan, generation-leader, did not thrill the critics with his last album, but the born-again Christian theme appealed to the Gospel Music Association. Dylan was presented with a Dove Award from the association this week. Terry Bradshaw of the world champion Pittsburgh Steelers was on hand for the Opryland event in Nashville. Dylan was not.

A young man's $20-million lawsuit claiming a star of the Charlie's Angels television series had tortured him sexually with telepathic messages has been thrown out of court. Judge Ronald Prenner of Orange County superior court this week dismissed 23-year-old Mario Arballo's suit against actress Jaclyn Smith, noting that an identical suit by Arballo in Los Angeles County suffered the same fate. Acting as his own lawyer, the one-time college student said the television star has continually contacted him telepathically since March 29, 1977, with suggestions of "deviate sexual acts."

At least it looked good at the press conference, but in real life it's not too likely that Tim Conway could meet ex-heavyweight champ Jimmy Ellis in the ring and survive — let alone knock him out. But it was all for a good [illegible] week in Hollywood. Conway got to plug his new comedy, The Prize Fighter, and, at the same time, raise money for an amateur boxers' fund — the latter in honor of Chuck Robinson, an 18-year-old Olympic contender killed in that plane crash in Poland.

Dan Hill has a new record out — If Dreams Had Wings — and will be kicking off the opening of Ontario Place Forum in May. He'll also be taking his tearful folk-pop out west for the summer.

Canadian pianist Robert Silverman in town this weekend

Silverman guest pianist with Victoria Symphony

A Canadian pianist whose career has soared in the last few years, carrying him to prestigious international heights, will be the Victoria Symphony Orchestra's guest this weekend.

Robert Silverman will play the Bartok Third Piano Concerto with Paul Freeman and the orchestra.

Dr.Freeman, now approaching the conclusion of his first season as the Victoria Symphony's music director, has established solid support from Victoria's concert-going public. He is possibly the first conductor in the history of the orchestra who has, more than once, won standing ovations for himself and the ensemble.

The forthcoming Sunday and Monday programs, balance the Bartok, a 20th century masterpiece, and Divertissement, composed by Jacques Ibert in 1929, with the baroque Haydn 'London' Symphony No.104 in D Major, and an excerpted piece by the little-known Canadian composer of the late romantic period, Alexis Contant.

This last is Interlude from Contant's oratorio, Cain. Like all Canada's composers of the time, he has suffered almost entire eclipse. Yet Cain is an oratorio of major proportions containing some splendid choruses, and the Interlude is described as one of its most beautiful numbers.

Ibert's Divertissement was written as incidental music for a revival of the amusing play, The Italian Straw Hat. The music parodies Viennese waltzes, Mendelssohn's Wedding March, and French cafe music numbers. It ends with an uproarious finale in gallop tempo.

Youth concerts get topmarks

A recent series of concerts for school children by Victoria Symphony Orchestra saw busloads of youngsters arriving at McPherson Playhouse from most schools in the Greater Victoria area, including special schools and the George Pearkes Clinic.

The concerts proved highly popular. Glen Fast, assistant conductor of the Vancouver Symphony, was on the podium. He talked to his young audience about the pieces they would hear, and introduced various instruments.

The program included Von Suppe's Light Cavalry Overture, two excerpts from Bizet's Carmen, the Faure Pavanne and the final stirring movement from Beethoven's Symphony No.7. It ended with music from the movie, Rocky.

Co-operating with the Symphony Society and School Board No.61 in the undertaking, the McPherson Playhouse Foundation provided the theatre and staff services free of charge.

Symphony officials have expressed appreciation for the manner in which McPherson staff assisted in comfortably settling disadvantaged children.

The series was part of a program of children's and youth concerts for which the Society had received a $25,000 grant from the School Board.

A free concert by the 17 piece Pacific Rim Big Band will take place Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Parkland Secondary School, 10640 McDonald Park Road.

Gord Clements, lead sax and leader of the band, says the concert is part of a design he has for taking the music out to smaller centres around the perimeter of Greater Victoria.

This free event is being made possible by a grant from the Music Performance Trust Fund through the Victoria Musicians Association and sponsorship by Lann Copeland Music Centre at Brentwood.

Opening ball of the restored Crystal Gardens will be hosted Saturday by the Four Seasons Musical Theatre Society. The 'good old times' will be re-enacted among tropical gardens, waterfalls and flamingos, to the melodies of Chick Webb and his orchestra.

The plan is to conjure up the 20s and early 30s in music and dance, with Charles Hofmann of silent film music fame as M.C.

An entertainment feature will be the performance by Janie Woods Morris and Helen Middleton of songs from the Four Season's forthcoming summer production of the Emily Carr musical, The Wonder of it All.

Prizes for costume and dance contests will be awarded by judges Mayor Bill Tindall, Archie McKinnon, Bebe Eversfield and Bert Zala.

Tickets are limited and can be purchased at various outlets. For information call 385--3424. Refreshments are not included in the ticket price of $10.

The event is a fund-raising effort on behalf of the Emily Carr musical.

A National Film Board documentary, The Performer, has been selected for competition at the 1980 Cannes Film Festival in the short film category.

A three-minute film, it is part of the NFB's Canada Vignettes series of 100 films about people, places and events in Canada's past and present.

The Performer follows a handsome white-haired gentleman as he jogs, exercises, vocalises, sings opera arias as he drives his car, signs autographs for fans.

Finally, just before performance time, immaculate in evening dress, he slips on a pair of rubbers.

The performer is Roger Doucet, solo singer of O Canada on the ice of Montreal's Forum before a National Hockey League game.

Anyone who is an adult drama festival fan can have a ball by driving up to Qualicum Beach next week. The North Vancouver Island Zone Drama Festival is taking place there from Monday through Saturday, at the Village Theatre.

Plays long and short are entered from points north and south, including Campbell River and Ladysmith. Ibsen's A Doll's House is a Nanaimo Theatre Group entry on Tuesday, and Michael Cristofer's The Shadow Box from Yellow Point will be the Thursday evening production. Other evenings present programs of one act plays.

Adjudicator for the event is Elizabeth Ball, artistic director of Carousel Company and School in Vancouver. She will offer both a public adjudication styled for the audience, and a private one for the directors and casts.

Canadian directors— much to be desired

TORONTO (CP) — Producer Robert Lantos, who has hired Canadian directors for the five movies he has made, says the homegrown directors leave much to be desired.

"Directors and writers: those are the most serious problems we have in the Canadian film industry right now," Lantos said in an interview.

"There are only three great Canadian directors, Norman Jewison, Ted Kotcheff and Arthur Hiller, and they all live in Hollywood and they're not trying to work here."

Jewison, an internationally-acclaimed film-maker living near Toronto, hasn't directed a Canadian movie. Kotcheff, who directed the Canadian-made Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, recently directed North Dallas Forty and is busy on other U.S. projects. Hiller directed Love Story and The In-Laws.

Lantos, with partner Stephen Roth, has made In Praise of Older Women and the forthcoming Ageny, Suzanne and Your Ticket Is No Longer Valid.

He said the three directors "probably were offered nine of 10 films made in Canada last year but turned them all down . . . probably because they regard doing Canadian films as a retrogressive step image-wise or they're being advised to turn them down by their agents for the same reason.

"Maybe they'll come back. I certainly hope they do because we don't have any proven directors and screenwriters in Canada with acclaim internationally and perhaps, more importantly, a reputation that gets stars interested."

Lantos said he was impressed with the promise that young Canadian screenwriters are showing, although he admits they need developing.

"The raw talent is amazing. But on one film I spent $50,000 and four drafts trying to get a script from a Canadian. That's a lot."

Canadian producers, however, are the getting the respect they deserve, Lantos says.

"Sure, there's a lot of junk because of the boom, and a lot of jokes. Envious jokes. Every time I'm in Los Angeles I get attacked for the lousy films made in Canada. So I name 15 lousy ones made in the United States and they shut up.

Another trek up Walton's Mountain?

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fried chicken, corn-on-the-cob, biscuits and honey. An apt farewell supper for the long running homespun series, The Waltons.

At least, last weekend's gathering had the air of a farewell supper until CBS vice-president for programming Bud Grant took to the stage and said: "We're looking forward to another season with The Waltons.

Two of the few members of the Waltons cast in attendance, Ellen Corby (Grandma) and Jon Walmsley (Jason) seemed as surprised as everyone else. Miss Corby, still recovering from a stroke that has limited her appearances on the show in the past two seasons, laughed and gave Walmsley a congratulatory pat on the back.

So, it appears that writer Earl Hamner's enduring tale of family life in the Virginia mountains will be around for at least one more season, despite some rather formidable hindrances.

Michael Learned, who appeared occasionally on The Waltons in its eighth season this year, has announced that she intends to move on to other things next fall. She made a similar announcement last year when she expected the show to be dropped by CBS, but was persuaded to drop in a few times this season in her Olivia Walton (Mama) role.

Also, Ralph Waite, who plays John Walton, the patriarch of Walton's Mountain, has said that he doesn't plan to carry his role into a ninth season.

With the departure of Waite and Miss Learned from the show, The Waltons would seem less the traditional ideal it has been and more the modern American family — of the splintered sort — as the show moves through the Second World War years. Of the original 11-member family, only six would still be with the show, although the cast has gradually grown with the addition of other characters through the years.

In an interview later in the week, though, Grant said nothing is certain about The Waltons, including the departure of Waite and Miss Learned.

"I think that's still open for discussion," Grant said, "we'll just have to wait and see.

"The Waltons has not been picked up for next season, but this is certainly not necessarily its last season, by any means."

It would seem that the future of the series would be affected in party by the performance of the Norman Lear-Alex Haley series Palmerstown, which is currently running in The Waltons Thursday night slot. If Palmerstown doesn't make it, CBS would be loathe to embark upon a new season without a steady family oriented entry in that time slot.

Even if Palmerstown does make it (and its premiere episode rated strongly), Grant says "that doesn't necessarily mean it will get that Thursday time period."

Lee Rich, president of Lorimar Productions, which makes The Waltons, seems more certain about the show's future.

"Whoever we have, whatever we have, we will go," Rich said. "What they (CBS) have told us so far is that in all likelihood, it will be back. I suppose we'll be hearing in the next month or so."

That will be when CBS settles on a rough schedule for the fall, after considering the sundry pilots and tryout series its programming executives have been surveying these past weeks.

records

By ISAAC WILLIAMS

Every year, about this time, the development of Canadian music suffers a staggering set-back. The perpetrator is the music industry and their Juno Awards. Just when Canadian artists seem ready to break out of their colonial mold of being second rate copies of mostly American influences along comes the Junoes to restore the boring order. It comes as no surprise that most of the nominees for this year's awards have been in the running every year since the Juno was inititated. The selections are enough to make one laugh but it is a very sick joke indeed. The awards capture a lot of media attention and that is where the harm occurs. The general public will yawn when they hear the selections and victors and everyone's suspicions that Canadian music is second rate, will be confirmed for another year.

There are a multitude of reasons why the award is useless and for the sake of argument I will name a few. One of the biggest problems is that the awards are run by the music industry instead of a more impartial board, such as a music paper. The record companies use the nominations to gather a lot of free advertising and the choices are faily evenly divided among the half dozen big companies. Artists on independent labels are left out in the cold and since most of the good music over the past year has been on small labels we can see that most of the best isn't even considered. It seems that artists that went to England to obtain contracts are also left off the list as neither The Pointed Sticks nor Martha and The Muffins are mentioned.

Another complaint is that the major companies are merely subsidiaries of international corporations and their tastes reflect their international bias. A couple of the most glaring examples of this are the nominations of Neil Young and Joni Mitchell. Both are now U.S. citizens and Young, in particular, is capable of winning nearly every category in the awards. He won't win of course, that would be just too outrageous, but why then even bother to nominate either of them? A further example of this is found in the Most Promising Group selections. At least three of the nominees have recorded cover versions of international hits and these songs seem to be the sole reason for their nominations. The big companies are encouraging their artists to record cover versions of sixties hits in a hope for radio airplay. This is a real slap in the face for Canadian composers. The FM album, Surveillance, was almost ruined because of the version of Shapes of Things To Come that was tacked on to the end of side one. Good for a few radio plays but very bad for the group's hard earned reputation.

I was going to include a blow by blow discription of some of the nominations but it is not really necessary. If you know anything at all about Canadian music you will have already been disgusted by the choices. If you weren't then you should keep reading this column and discover some real prize winning music. The only bit of Juno optimism that I can foresee is that this could be the last Juno awards. At the rate the major companies are going bankrupt by this time next year there won't be any left. Then some real progress can take place.

Pure uncensored Millie

By JOHN PALMER
New York Times

Millie Jackson has developed a reputation for talking dirty and influencing people. It started in 1974, with an album called Caught Up, the first of her recordings on which she was co-producer and the first to include the sort of uninhibited banter she habitually inserts between songs in her shows. The album went gold, one thing led to another, and Miss Jackson found herself becoming better known for her recorded "raps" than for her singing. Her latest album, Live and Uncensored, on the Spring-Polydor label, exploits this image to the hilt. A warning sticker asserts that the album, a two-disk set recorded live at the Roxy Theater in Los Angeles, "contains explicit language which may be considered objectionable by some listeners — for mature audiences only." While the band finds a rhythmic groove and vamps away on it, Jackson raps at length, and often quite winningly.

But Jackson also happens to be a superb soul singer, and one of a small handful of artists who have been able to retain a Southern soul feeling in their work while competing commercially with disco and rock. "The reason I've kept that feeling," Jackson said the other day over lunch, "is that I hate disco. It's as simple as that. Boom, boom, we dance, you dance. Disco music, the majority of it, just doesn't say anything. I'd rather listen to a good country-and-western song."

Miss Jackson has, in fact, recorded some country material. "There was a period there when people would jump all over you if you said certain things in a song," she said, " if you were black. It got so that country songwriters were able to say more, so I did some of their material." This concern with "saying something" emerges, in the course of a conversation, as the most important single element in Miss Jackson's work. It's the reason she chooses to sing certain songs, the reason she enjoys talking to audiences and the reason she isn't worried about being typecast as a female Richard Pryor. "As long as people are calling you something," she said, "they're at least acknowledging the fact that you exist. I know a lot of people now are relating more to what I have to say than to my singing, but I think that's what takes me away from being the same as the rest."

"You know," Miss Jackson concluded, "I'm from Georgia; I'm a country girl. And us country girls like to say what's on our minds. As long as you say what's on your mind, there isn't going to be any doubt about what's on your mind."

Garcia's new album an unlikely mix

jazz

By LEONARD FEATHER
Los Angeles Times

The past couple of months have seen a widely diversified and generally rewarding assortment of jazz-related albums, among which the least likely stems from the most improbable source. In a sense, it is the product of a remote area in New Zealand where Russ Garcia, composer and conductor, now makes his home.

Technically, the album is a creature of the United States, having been recorded in Venice, California; however, Garcia wrote it under isolated conditions that offered him uninterrupted inspiration. The result, entitled Variations for Fluegelhorn, String Quartet, Bass, and Drums (Trend TR 522), is one of the most sensitively written ventures of its kind.

Oakland-born Garcia, a former name-band trumpeter, first established himself firmly in Hollywood as an NBC staff musician and writer of motion picture scores, and later as arranger-conductor during the 1950s for albums by Ella Fitzgerald, Louis Armstrong, Oscar Peterson, Anita O'Day and dozens more.

"We spent six years stopping off at various islands across the Pacific: then in 1972 we were in New Zealand and decided that was where we wanted to stay.

"Our home is miles away from Kerikeri, the nearest village. It's breathtakingly beautiful. We could stay there, if we wanted to, and be totally self-sufficient, given all the fish and the fruit trees; but I've had a lot of calls to work all over the place, so I spend seven or eight months a year traveling. I just came to Hollywood from Vienna, where I completed several assignments for radio and TV, with the symphony and a big jazz orchesta. I have been commissioned to write a new work for The Orchestra, to be performed at the Los Angeles Music Center.

"It's a great life. I must admit I have the best of both worlds."

Garcia was in Los Angeles for a film assignment when Albert Marx, a music-loving record-company head (this is not always a contradiction in terms), asked him to write whatever he wante dfor a new album.

The "Variations" come in eight movements, with Chuck Findley, a fluegelhorn soloist a rare eloquence, as the centerpiece. The supple rhythmic undercurrent, supplied by Bob Magnusson on bas sand Steve Schaeffer on drums, merges with Garcia's richly textured string writing to provide a low-keyed, yet majestic, setting for Findley. It is a fair assumption that every horn player from Dizzy Gillespie on down will listen to this work in rapt admiration and may well seek out Garcia for comparable services. Four and a half stars. Incidentally, the splendid sound is due to the use of Sony's PCM Digital recording system.

As the other end of the spectrum, from the Norman Granz stable of ad-lib jazz, comes Just Friends (Pablo 2310-841), by John Haley (Zoot) Sims on tenor sax and Harry (Sweets) Edison on trumpet. The material per se is of minor interest (seven old standards and a blues). What elevates the album to four-star stature is the unyielding creativity one can always count on from such mature artists. As a potent bonus, the eminent Roger Kellaway is on hand, playing acoustic and electric keyboards. Yet another plus factor is Sim's doubling on soprano sax, which he handles with smooth conviction. Had he or Edison or Kellaway taken the trouble to write some fresh material, This could well have been a five-star set.

J.J. Johnson, who during the bebop era was the trombone world's retort to Gillespie and Parker, is back on the scene with the first album in years for which he has written the music and played the main solo role. Pinnacles (Milestone M-9093) is a generally well-planned collection in which Johnson (busy in recent years writing music for television and movies) makes sensible and economic use of the two or three horns at his disposal.

Except for Cannonball Junction with its monotonous tenor sax by Joe Henderson and electronic vamp effects, and the concluding Mr. Clean, on whih a synthesizer tends to eliminate Johnson's personal sound, this is no-nonsense, cooking jazz. Particularly effective is the conversion of a traditional blues, See See Rider, to a jazz waltz. These sides remind us that Johnson set the pace for dozens of trombonists who, because of the attrition of time and his predilection for the pen, are better known today than he. Three and a half stars.

Pres (Pablo 2308-219), subtitled Lester Young in Washington, D.C., 1956, consists of private recordings taped when the tenor saxophonist was working at a club, backed by pianist Bill Potts, trio. As has been the case with Charlie Parker and Art Tatum, it will appeal to anyone who yearns to acquire every minute of music the artist ever put on record; however, the rhythm section is no more than adequate and its members were accorded generous solo time by Young, whose playing by then was past its peak (he died two and a half years later).

It is not contradictory to welcome material such as this to the market place while rating it as a two-star item (both the stars are for Pres).

From the live-club ambiance and pre-overdub era of Lester Young to the 1980s groove of a new album by Spyro Gyra, Catching the Sun (MCA 5108) is like tripping into another world, manned by producers, engineers, synthesizers, string selections, rhythm machines and the like. Yet there is more to Spyro Gyra than mechanical vamps and prefabricated funk.

Music of this caliber involves relatively little true spontaneity, despite the slick contributions of Jay Beckenstein, who functions as saxophonist, co-producer, and co-writer of several tunes. Now and then you find melodically attractive moments, as in Autumn of Our Love. Randy Brecker's trumpet and Barry Roger's trombone surface here and there.

It is impossible to imagine that anyone who is into Zoot Sims or Sweets or Press will find much time for Spyro Gyra (or vice versa), yet the group displays a superior level in conception and execution.

Staring disaster in face

By JULIAN REID

A CHOICE OF CATASTROPHES: The Disasters That Threaten Our World, by Isaac Asimov. Musson. $15.95.

The world may end with a bang or it may end with a whimper — just which is hardly a matter of pressing concern. Yet the topic is none the less fascinating for that. After all, there are few things more bracing than staring disaster full in the face — even if only vicariously, in the pages of a book.

Isaac Asimov's A Choice of Catastrophes is a real feast for inveterate disaster-watchers. Within the compass of a single readable volume it assembles every one of the scientifically conceivable collective dooms which may be lying in wait for humanity, weighs and evaluates each, and finally dismisses them all as either humanly surmountable, astronomically unlikely, or located so far in the future that there is no earthly point in losing sleep over them. All of which is reassuring, to say the least!

With splendid systemacity, Dr. Asimov subdivides his catalogue of prospective disasters into five distinct categories. "Catastrophes of the First Class" are the most inescapable, since they threaten to render the whole of Creation uninhabitable. Take, for instance, the fabled "heat-death of the universe" — the ultimate stabilization of thermodynamic entropy into the dull gray uniformity of universal nonentity. Fortunately, this "long-drawn-out whimper" of our cosmos is not due for another 1,000,000,000,000 years or so; and in any case, as the Good Doctor points out encouragingly, even if it does come, the laws of probability dictate that it will most emphatically not be final. In time, inevitably, an infinity of new universes must arise from the thermodynamic ashes of the old.

In any case, this most undramatic of catastrophes may itself be forestalled. Long before it is due, our universe may have ceased expanding and collapsed back in on itself, ending as a single all-consuming cosmic fireball indistinguishable from the one in which cosmologists claim it first began. But before that can happen, the stars themselves may have vanished, consumed by a proliferating network of voraciously destructive "black holes" which even now may be progressively undermining the familiar fabric of space and time.

Catastrophes of the Second Class are somewhat less daunting — they merely leave the entire Solar System unfit for life as we know it. The most likely prospect here is the ultimate expansion-and-collapse of the Sun, which is destined to take place a mere 7,000,000,000 years hence. Under the circumstances, it is positively exhilerating to learn that no presently recognizable Catastrophe of the Third Class (one in which only our own planet is rendered unliveable) seems likely to intervene, though such apocalyptic improbabilities as collisions with comets or a sudden failure of Earth's protective magnetic field remain staple themes for science-fiction writers.

It is only when we come to Asimov's fourth class of catastrophes, in which human life alone is totally wiped out, that the perils he describes begin to seem realistically imminent. Thus, while the threat of an Andromeda Strain style plague-from-space remains "in the highest degree unlikely," the man-made agents of bacteriological warfare are another matter. More threatening still is the suicidal possibility of an "all-out thermonuclear war," which Asimov characterizes as "the one true catastrophe of the fourth class that we can reasonably fear."

For good measure, however, he presses on to consider a fifth class of catastrophes — those in which civilization collapses utterly, though humanity as a species still hangs on. The most obvious agents here are the ecological threats posed by pollution and the ongoing depletion of non-renewable resources. But all these are potentially surmountable, if only we have the collective commonsense to take the necessary steps before it is too late.

We are left with a very special set of perils — those that Asimov labels "the Dangers of Victory." Most serious of these is the current population explosion, which he regards as the greatest single threat presently confronting humanity. But the disaster of worldwide over-population may yet be averted; and if it is, the prospects ahead are positively utopian. Especially when they are measured against the yardstick of the historical past, stricken as it was with an unending sequence of wars, plagues, famines and assorted other horrors.

All in all, A Choice of Catastrophes is vintage Asimov — the work of the foremost science popularizer of our times at the top of his form. It is encouraging to find that not even the unaccustomed gloom-and-doom of his subject matter have managed to dampen his customary ebullience. To the apocalyptic pessimism which is so depressingly fashionable, Asimov offers a bracingly timely antidote. In the immortal words of the late lamented Pogo Possum: "We have met the enemy, and he is us."

To China and beyond

By WALTER KELLYTHORNE

BEYOND THE CRIMSON MORNING, by George Ryga. Doubleday. $11.50.

CHINA: A Visual Adventure, by Carl Mydans and Michael Demarest. Musson. $19.95.

In 1975 George Ryga — playwright, novelist, activist — led a group of 23 Canadians to the People's Republic of China. This book is Ryga's record of that journey to China — and of Ryga's own journey into memory and the future.

The actual trip through China was no different than other trips we have all probably read about by now: Peking, Shanghai, Canton, the Great Wall, the Ming tombs, a hospital, a farm. Ryga's group toured the country while Mao was still alive — though barely — and it's obvious from this account that momentous changes were on their way for the Chinese people.

Ryga communicates a delightful feeling of openness about them and their society that contrasts vividly with accounts of travellers in a country like, say, the Soviet Union. The present advantages of the Chinese lives Ryga and his companions saw are obvious enough compared with their former lots, but above all there seemed to be an eagerness to partake of more. That meant, for these Chinese at least — and I suspect for most — a willingness to investigate what the West has to offer.

And so, of course, just that seems to be happening now.

Beyond The Crimson Morning is not just a travelogue, though — as if George Ryga could ever write just a travelogue!

Ryga's reflections on and observations of his fellow travellers are an integral part of this book, and though I suspect that his comments may often be politically motivated — I'll say no more about that — his affection for them is obvious.

Autobiography, too, is an important part of the design of this book. It's difficult at times to sort out precisely what is happening when in these fragments of flashbacks, but they — and, really, everything that Ryga offers us here — are intended primarily to frame his main observation: We in Canada must change or die.

Centering his discussion around Norman Bethune and the Chinese reverence for him, Ryga is most passionate.

He writes that our efforts to change must include "the effort of understanding our own individual and national potential for human heroism."

Any such effort — and he believes that the necessity for it is obvious — must also see "the beginnings of a reconstruction of a real and independent country with a humanist concept of itself and others, and an end of our self-inflicted morass of . . . cynicism."

He goes on, eloquently and at length, of what our future must also include, but his point is obvious — and, like his journey to China, inspiring. Like all such inspirations, it contains not a little contradiction and short-sightedness, but out of such clay, and combined with the right amounts of lucidity and truth, memorable works are born.

One would expect, too, that the clay that forms the bulk of China: A Visual Adventure would be fashioned into a book more impressive than it is.

Carl Mydans has probably taken thousands of photographs for Life magazine, and probably very competently too — as he took the pictures for this volume. His mind seems to have been elsewhere than on the scenes before him. Most of them might have been taken by any amateur well-grounded in basic technique who was also paying attention to "the scene."

The only pictures that really struck me are 15 portraits that indeed show, as the redundant caption tells us, that these are a "healthy and handsome" people.

The text by Michael Demarest is little more than a brochure of the obvious, and could have been omitted entirely: it's all been said before, and better.

Big Sur madness

By SUSAN WOLFE

THE RESORT, by Sol Stein. Gage. $14.50.

This novel should do for California vacation retreats what Jaws did for swimming in the Atlantic around Martha's Vineyard.

It could do more: mesmerize while forcing recognition of a virulence in American society. Not bad for a book making no pretensions of being "literature."

New Yorkers Margaret and Henry Brown, on a brief holiday, drive down Highway 1 and stop overnight at an isolated Big Sur resort, Cliffhaven. Almost immediately, they discover that Henry's Jewishness (Margaret is Christian) has triggered their imprisonment in a luxurious variation on Hitler's death-camp theme. Nobody ever leaves Cliffhaven.

The place is the creation of Merle Clifford — oil rich, sexually kinky, murderously anti-Semitic. He's a genetics buff with a monomaniacal aim to redress what he views as a general, overwhelming, unfair Jewish intellectual advantage. It evolved, he believes, from the centuries-old custom of dedicating Europe's best brains (read male) to the Church and celibacy, not procreation. Such naivete would have amused the Borgias.

Abetted by a sadistic staff, collusion by outside residents, marijuana in the food and prisoners' fear, Clifford has succeeded at genocide for six months. But Margaret and Henry are determined to survive and escape. They tear Cliffhaven's hellish fabric apart.

Purists will complain that every character is a stereotype. True — but beside the point. Simon has produced a thriller which maintains suspense right to its not-so-sanguine end. The Resort will remain chillingly in the mind for a long time.

Los Angeles Times

Charles more than 'Merry Monarch'

Antonia Fraser . . . lively prose

By ANTHONY JENKINS

CHARLES II, by Antonia Fraser. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $19.95.

A PILGRIMAGE OF PASSION: Wilfrid Scawen Blunt, by Elizabeth Longford. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $27.50.

It's some months now since Antonia Fraser's Charles II appeared in the bookstores and was briefly mentioned in these columns as one of the best books of the year. Though it has yet to match the popularity of her first biography, Mary Queen of Scots, the new work is, I think, equally as fine an achievement.

Lady Antonia is above all else a first-rate stylist. Without playing down to the general reader, she steers us through a maze of scholarly detail with clarity and drive. Her aim is to let us see Charles as his contemporaries saw him, and to achieve that focus she will frequently use a modern analogy.

Describing the carefully contrived arrangements for the king's coronation and their effect on foreign observers after 20 years of Cromwell's republicanism, she notes that one commentator "was astonished at the splendor of the palaces . . . as an Englishman today might be amazed at the richness of the palaces preserved in Poland or some other Iron Curtain country."

Her wit and sensitivity to words make her peculiarly open to the quirks of earlier writers. "Pepys . . . showed his particular interests by noting that the houses along the route had wealthy carpets and ladies (an interesting example of zeugma) hung out of their windows." This sense of fun is also the product of the detachment and intelligence with which she balances the pros and cons in Charles' character.

For although the book is a self-confessed "labor of love," Charles emerges as something other than the Merry Monarch of popular legend. Fraser presents him to us warts and all: world-weary, devious, lazy, and yet, for all that, all the more attractive a figure.

The years of exile before his restoration at 30 become the key to Charles' personality. Trained in his youth to be affable to all, in contrast to the alienating awkwardness of his father's manner, Charles never lost his supreme tolerance; indeed, his refusal to stand on ceremony was regarded as "something of a liability" by his advisers. But after his father's execution and his own flight into exile, he was marked by a "deep melancholy."

In poverty abroad, he learned to be cynical. If he were to regain the kingship he had to bend to the winds, to offend no one, to seize what he could without prejudicing himself. "He did not scupper his own cause. And in this he did better than many a royal or political exile before or since."

On his return to England, Charles did not forget those who, in however minor a way, had helped his escape, a flight, we are told, made the more difficult by his unusual height and swarthy complexion. But he also refrained from revenge towards his ex-enemies. In fact, had it not been for his ministers, he would have welcomed complete religious tolerance.

Having seen how easily a king could become a mere man or, for that matter, how a Cromwell had become a monarch, he never magnified himself, even though he had been welcomed back to England with no political strings to bind him to the will of Parliament. Typically, then, Charles dined with jockeys and actresses because they amused him, and he encouraged the arts because he enjoyed them, not for the promotion of his public image.

Charles genuinely liked women. Though he is often thought to have let them rule him, he is shown here as indulging his mistresses' ambitions only so far as they furthered his own policies. He appears to have loved only his sister, who became his unofficial ambassadress as a princess of France, and he grew to admire and trust his pious but worthy queen. Had he not, he might have divorced her to beget an heir, for he seems to have had no illusions about the sort of king his brother would be.

Bent on survival, Charles may have lacked a long-term policy, but he achieved what few Stuarts did: his death, though agonized and protracted, took place in his own royal bed.

"Here was a man who knew all about Sloth and Lust, but was singularly free from Pride, Greed, Avarice, Anger and Envy. As for the Virtues, he was touched in some measure by them all, from Charity downwards, including Temperance, while in exile, and Prudence at home."

Another recent biography fares less well. Elizabeth Longford (Lady Antonia's mother) has had access to the papers and the "Secret Memoirs" of the Victorian poet, explorer, politician, and rebel, Wilfrid Blunt. One of those engaging amateurs of practically everything, Blunt would seem a likely subject for a lively book, but the tangle of his interests and eccentricities proves overwhelming. Here there is no clear line.

Blunt was born in 1840 and died in 1922, despite having been an invalid for most of his life. Allied to some of the bluest blood in the country, he was defiantly anti-establishment in his support of liberty for Ireland and for the caliphs of the Near East.

He began his career as a minor diplomat. With his good looks, he was mothered and petted by the wives of ambassadors, fell hopelessly in love with 'Skittles', the demi-mondaine, and finally married Lord Byron's grand-daughter.

Blunt spent his life in passionate pursuit of women, and could never understand why his wife might object to that. His unorthodox views on ideal love led to idylls in the desert sands, furtive scamperings up the back stairs, and constant frustration. Yet the long line of his loves becomes boring. Blunt had no sense of proportion in any of his passions, and so he has no sense of irony or of his own ridiculousness. And his biographer, alas, rarely supplies that leavening humor.

For all his pugnacious contradictions, Blunt is nevertheless typical of one facet of the Victorians' fierce individualism. He might have emerged as a clearer, more interesting figure had he been set firmly within his times. Instead, that wider perspective is sacrificed to a welter of day-to-day detail so that, for me, he never became the prophet-figure that he became, in his old age, for men like T.E. Lawrence. I found him tiresome.

Bahamas woos Canadians away from Maui

Peppermint Stick lighthouse at Hope Town, Abaco, lures tourists to paradise

The Bahamas is tackling Hawaii head on in a battle over Canadian tourists.

The 700-odd islands in the Commonwealth of the Bahamas lie just a short air hop off the Florida coast and tourism makes up 70 per cent of income.

Not surprisingly then, the Bahamas has set a target to double the $500 million tourism income by 1983 to one billion dollars.

With much of the world in the grips of a fuel crisis, travel experts have predicted that more and more North Americans will stop home or curtail their trip abroad this summer.

The Bahamas sees itself as one of the closest foreign countries to North America and hopes it will reap rich rewards as a handy holiday haven.

It is out to beat its rivals of Barbados and the Caribbean nations and Hawaii.

A 35-strong tourism delegation from the Bahamas is now in Canada whipping up support for places such as Nassau, Freeport, Paradise Island and the outlying Family Islands.

The delegation, made up of government officials, hoteliers and tour operators began its sales pitch in Vancouver this week and will spend the next two weeks heading east.

Once colonial jail, now library in Nassau

The permanent secretary of the Bahamas Ministry of Tourism, Basil O'Brien, made a brief visit to Victoria to spread the word here early in the week.

O'Brien is the civil servant head of the ministry and is confident the delegation will boost the 145,000 total of Canadians visiting his country each year. That is 13 per cent of the total tourists and not unexpectedly, 70 per cent are Americans who take the short jet ride over from Florida.

"This year we are looking at persuading 200,000 Canadians to go to the Bahamas," O'Brien says with an air that suggests the target is all but achieved.

Overall, the year has begun well for the Bahamas with a 4 per cent lift in tourism.

But in British Columbia the growth has been substantial, O'Brien said, with a 35 per cent increase.

The dramatic increase in B.C. tourists to the Bahamas can be put down to a shrewd business venture of opening a Bahamas Tourist Office in Vancouver last September.

Previously, the Bahamians had concentrated in the East. By opening an office on the West Coast they more directly tackled Hawaii as a tourist destination and appear to be making inroads on that market.

O'Brien shrugs off a suggestion that the Bahamas has an image of being an expensive vacation paradise and says that may have been true in the 1950s but not today as daily hotel rates average $70 to $80—on a par with the United States.

The air fares of about $500 return from our area were comparable to Hawaii and the Bahamas was picking up in appeal as an alternative to year after year at Maui.

O'Brien said his homeland was a newer destination and more unique than Hawaii, which was becoming too commercialized.

"You certainly couldn't find the huge stretches of isolated beaches we have in the Bahamas in Hawaii anymore," he added.

The Bahamas experience is billed as three holidays in one.

There is the capital of Nassau on New Providence Island and nearby Paradise Island. A short jet ride away is Freeport on Grand Bahama Island and another type of holiday. The third part of the package is the outer islands, which more recently have become known as the Family Islands.

"If you only visit Nassau and Freeport you haven't seen the Bahamas," was the way one advertisement in the Bahamas tourism magazine put it.

The Bahamas "family," which begins only 50 miles from the Florida coast, manages to dot itself over 100,000 square miles of the Atlantic and there is a quiet beach for everyone, it seems.

The basic attraction of the islands is "sun, sand and sea" although there are gambling casinos in Nassau, Freeport and on Paradise Island.

O'Brien indicated the casinos were there under sufferance, largely for their revenue. Protests from Bahamian churches had seen a law passed which prohibited locals from attending the casinos. Even the croupiers were foreigners, largely Britons.

Basil O'Brien. . . wants 200,000 Canadians

The sun is there year round and the rates come down for the rainy season which cools down "paradise" with an average of six inches of the wet stuff each month between May and October.

Boom months are roughly coincidental with the northern winter—from November through April—and rainfall is slight. Bahamians hasten to add that even the wet season is not monsoonal and life all year round is highly agreeable.

As the competition for tourist dollars hots up, the Bahamas has developed some pluses in its own arsenal.

One is the "People-to-People" scheme which matches tourists up with locals of similar beliefs or interests. The locals are meant to show the visitors a typical day in their life, but the scheme has snowballed a little and according to O'Brien most Bahamians tend to be more lavish than they ordinarily would.

The result is "most favored people" treatment for the tourists and obviously, the scheme is thriving.

Canadians could be forgiven, too, if they sometimes have to blink twice to see if they are not still at home. It won't be the year-round temperatures of between 23 and 30 degrees celsius that will have caused it either, but the business names like the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank and the Nova Scotia.

The Bahamas has banking as its second largest income earner behind tourism and the Canadian investment is increasing. O'Brien said current Canadian investment was worth well over $300 million.

The friendly persuasion to invest in such things as hotels in the islands continues.

O'Brien said part of the incentives was a 10 to 20 year complete tax holiday for the investors.

It appears even taxation can take a holiday in the Bahamas.

Tour leaves you in a time capsule

AROUND the WORLD

with STAN DELAPLANE

From Los Angeles: "You don't have to fly to Romania ($1,600 round-trip) to get the Gerovital H-3 treatment. They give it to you in Nevada—the ONLY state that permits it." (The Federal Food and Drug Administration will NOT approve GH-3 but some doctors in England, Spain and Mexico prescribe it.)

GH-3—first used by Dr. Ana Asian of Romania—has been around a long time. It's based on Procaine—a kissing cousin of Novocain. Travel agents run tours for people who'd heard about it.

Mainly, it's supposed to put you in a time capsule. You won't get younger, but you won't get older. At least not as fast. Users have gone further. "It halted my menopause." "My fingernails grew longer and stronger." "It helped my arthritis."

The Los Angeles reader was skeptical and still isn't convinced, but "I think it's helping my arthritic knees." (She's been on the capsules for eight days.)

Treatment is given in Room 206 of the Jockey Club on the Las Vegas Strip. Prime Time Tours runs a travel deal. Medical costs are $285—for a physical exam, plus six months supply of capsules. And it's illegal to take them out of Nevada, probably the most fractured law west of the Rockies

WE GOT ALL KINDS of recipes for Singapore gin sling. Massachusetts man sends HIS on the impressive stationery of the grand old Raffles Hotel. Signed by the manager. Must be as authentic as you can get.

"1-2 peg of gin. 1-2 peg fresh lemon juice. 1-2 liqueur glass Cherry Brandy Herring. 1-4 liqueur glass orange Curacao and the same of D.O.M. Benedictine. Few drops of Angostura bitters. Shake it up with ice."

(Never sure about English drink measurements. But I expect a "peg" means one shot.)

FRIEND WRITES FROM Haiti: "Noticed you talked about good wood carvings in this tropical land of rum and sugar. The black sculptor turns out some fine work. The bowls and tableware are good, too. But there's a bug in it. The bug is termites. Or their eggs which will hatch when you get them home.

"There's an easy remedy: Put the wood carving in the freezer overnight. That's the end of the termite eggs."

I FOUND THE BEST-PRICED wood carvings at the Salvation Army in Port-au-Prince. Turned out by a school they run for the handicapped. S.A. chief told me: "You don't have to worry about termites in our work. We treat the wood before we put it on sale."

TRAVELLER FROM SPAIN: "We went to Italica, the ruins of the Roman city outside Seville. Well worth the trip. And they haven't ruined the ruins, thank the Roman Gods, as the Greeks did with the magnificent temple to Poseidon at the end of the Aegean peninsula. Built a restaurant right in front of it."

ITALICA IS IN THE middle of an olive grove. Actually most of this important Roman outpost is still beneath the olive trees. A number of mosaic floors have been uncovered and a fine colosseum stands above the trees.

Three Roman Emperors were born in Italica. I went out there with Max Borrel, a sportsman who was Franco's favorite companion on shooting and fishing trips.

"Emperor Hadrian was born here," said Max. "He was the first person to write about dry fly fishing. Did you know that?" (No, I didn't. Now I do. And so do you.)

MAN I KNOW SHOPS FOR joy. Can't pass a store overseas without going in. Just home from Singapore: "Duty-free shopping in Singapore is about 15 per cent higher on everything than the same things in Hong Kong." (There's constant bickering between the two cities, both competing to sell to the tourist.)

AIRLINE MAN IN MADRID: "The chivalrous custom of greeting a lady by kissing her hand has pretty well gone out of style in Spain. A lot of antique manners stayed alive when Spain was isolated from Europe by geography and politics. But now tourists are washing over the land and the Don Quixote things are losing ground. Too bad. It was a graceful gesture."

Great idea, but watch your 'fill it up'

Travel Update

Have said before that BritRail was on the right track. Well now they're heading down the right road, too.

In a move that will bring a chorus of "egad the rotters" from rivals, BritRail joins fleets with Godfrey Davis from April 1 (no significance in the date, I'm sure) to offer foreign travellers discounted rail and car hire privileges.

Zipping round Britain in a Ford Capri, for example, will cost $239 for 14 days or $327 for 21 days and there's the advantage of leaving huge chunks of your adventuring to the efficient, comfortable trains.

The popular BritRail pass gives unlimited train travel for your chosen number of days and with a special voucher you can make the same number of car rental transactions—one a day if you wish—to take you where the tracks don't run.

The only damper on the whole marriage of train and car facilities was a rider on the bottom of a BritRail news release. It warned that at $3.50 a gallon for gasoline even a medium size car can cost $40 if you say fill it up.

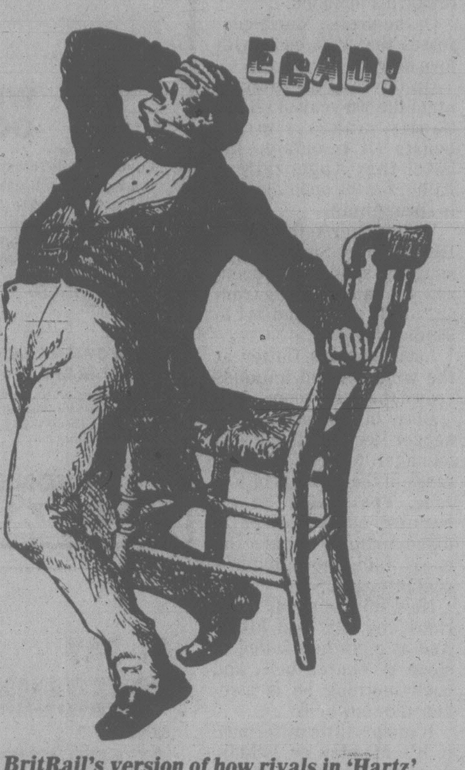
MOST NATIONAL PARK recreational fees have gone up for the first time since 1975, Environment Canada reports.

From April 1 (there's that date again) daily camping fees are being increased from $3 to $4.50 in a campground with standard central utilities; from $5 to $7 for a campsite with individual electricity outlets; and from $6 to $8 for a campsite with individual electricity, sewer and water outlets. As well, there's a new $3 fee for unserviced camping areas. Even staying in Canada is going to cost more this year.

CANADA TOPPED THE two million overseas visitor mark in 1979—to be precise exactly 2,010,632 of them ventured to the land of the maple leaf.

That was up 18 per cent over 1978 and there were several milestones set along the way.

Visitors from the United Kingdom topped 500,000 for the first time and continued to be the major source of overseas tourists. West Germans came here—200,000 plus of them— and those from the Netherlands exceeded 100,000.



BritRail's version of how rivals in 'Hartz' and 'Ovis' will greet their innovation

It was the first year that the number of visitors to Canada from overseas countries exceeded the number of Canadians going to these countries.

United States visitors stayed home a little more in 1979 and even though Canada welcomed 31,191,590 of them, the figure was down by more than 3 per cent.

However, other good news from the Canadian Government Office of Tourism was that preliminary figures for the international travel account showed receipts of $2,866 million in 1979 up 20 per cent on the $2,378 million a year earlier.

The bad news was that total travel payments were in deficit by $1,097 million but even then, the deficit was decreasing.

IF YOU'VE BEEN WANTING to go to Botswana, South Africa or Boputhatswana on safari but were too scared or dubious over the travel arrangements, help is apparently on the way.

Gametrackers, which has a Granville Street office in Vancouver, is sending its executive director Jon Panos to the West Coast early in April apparently to do some reassuring and confidence building for the safaris they run.

Panos and other Gametrackers directors are apparently game rangers first, businessmen second and would rather "meet you around a campfire in the African wilderness than in a hotel suite" media types were told in a recent release bolstering support.

They put it better than I could: "Just trying to get them (the directors-game rangers) away from their beloved bush to spend a few days in 'civilization' is like persuading an elephant to leave his favorite mudhole at noon."

Panos is due in Victoria April 10 to meet the travel trade.

JUST FOR THE record. The French transport ministry has published statistics that show wide-bodied jets such as the Boeing 747 and the Airbus are more economical on fuel per passenger-kilometre than private motor vehicles in town. But have you ever tried to park one of those jumbos in Fort Street?

Our very popular Tours, staying at the deluxe "Onslow Hotel" right in downtown Reno, are sold out for the next month and a half. Space is available on May 25th and throughout the month of June. Everyone enjoys the hospitality and service at the Onslow with its popular Casinos and Restaurants where you can have such a great time without leaving your hotel, if that's your wish. If you'd like to take advantage of it, don't hesitate. Give us a call before it's too late.
CANADIAN ROCKIES TOUR
May 21 to 31 Eleven Scenic Days $375 Dbl., $395 Twin
A marvelous opportunity to enjoy the scenic beauty of the Rockies at a time of year when rivers and streams are at their best, the freshness of Spring is everywhere and the summer crowds have not arrived. Across the Southern route through Hope and Princeton to Osoyoos, continuing through the glorious mountains to Cranbrook, two nights at lovely Waterton Lakes with a sightseeing tour into famous Glacier National park, two nights in picturesque Banff, visiting Lake Louise and the Columbia Ice fields enroute to Jasper for two nights at the Andrew Motor Lodge. Westward then via the Yellowhead Highway to Prince George, returning homeward via Barkerville, Williams Lake and the scenic Fraser Valley. A great Scenic Experience.
PORTLAND ROSE PARADE
June 23 to 26 Four Colorful Days $150 Dbl., $160 Twin
Certainly one of the finest floral parades on the continent. Our hotel, right near the beginning of the parade route, offers fine viewing seats arranged on their parking lot. Lloyd Shopping Centre is just a stroll away for afternoon shopping. The return trip takes you along the mighty Columbia River and Northward through Yakima, Washington and Wenatchee, famous Ohme Garden and the picturesque Bavarian Village, over scenic Stevens Pass to the Duty Free Shop and Home. We have limited space on the 2nd Bus so give us a call.
ALASKA BUS/CRUISES
June 18 and 22, July 16 and 20. $785 Dbl., $800 Twin
Four "BETTER THAN EVER" departures for 1980.
Better than ever for two reasons: Cruising aboard a very fine Cruise Boat, the "Odessa" with full facility staterooms with two beds (not bunks), swimming pool, medical facilities, entertainment lounges and a pleasant and efficient crew. Personal experience by one of our staff on a Gulf Cruise proves that the Odessa lives up to her fine reputation. Secondly we offer the opportunity to fly in to famous "Dawson City" the scene of the "Gold Rush of '98" from Whitehorse, Yukon. The entire tour, either going North by Ship and returning by Coach, or beginning the journey by coach, returning by Ship, offers a comprehensive tour of one of the worlds last frontiers. Central and Northern British Columbia, the Yukon Territories the Trail of '98 between Whitehorse and Skagway Alaska and the "Inside passage" between Vancouver and Skagway. Limited space available in June and a little more in July.

Short men walk tall in Appenzell

ON the GO with JERRY HULSE

APPENZELL, Switzerland — Here it is, the last bastion of male supremacy in Switzerland—and a promising battlefield for women's libbers.

Yes sir, in Appenzell it's the man who takes the reins.

What's more, the ladies aren't the least bit concerned. Offered the right to vote in local elections, they turned the proposition down. No interest. None.

They simply said no.

As far as the women of Appenzell are concerned, such responsibilities should be left up to the men.

It's been this way for centuries.

What it adds up to is that the males of this vest-pocket village in northeastern Switzerland settle the various issues without so much as consulting their wives or girlfriends.

On the last Sunday of April they present themselves in an open square just outside a hotel. It is here the voting takes place. Not by ballot but by a show of hands.

Pretty crafty, these Appenzellers—making it impossible to stuff the ballot box.

And heaven help the dissenter. In a town where males appear at the polls wearing swords (an ancient ritual to prove their maturity), going against the majority could result in a sharp rebuff.

As for the ladies of Appenzell, it is said they give their men free rein for a number of reasons, not the least being their stature. For some unfathomable reason, the majority of Appenzell's menfolk aren't particularly tall.

So it's an ego trip, this thing of male supremacy. And the ladies of this quaint village do their best to make their men feel powerful.

Appenzell is a relaxful and peaceful town, and because of it, it draws big crowds. Particularly in summer.

There are Alpine peaks and high meadows, and it is there that Appenzellers graze their cattle in summertime.

This trek to the pastures in June and the return in autumn are times of celebration.

Decked out in yellow knickers and red vests, the farmers parade their cattle, adorning the horns with freshly picked wild flowers.

Besides swords, Appenzellers wear earrings in the image of their cattle. This is not to say they're sissies. For pint-size people they're tough and rugged.

Take 54-year-old Josef Dobler. He has arms like a Marine sergeant and a neck like a wrestler. Never mind that he's barely five feet tall. He's as feisty as he's talented, and that's a rather involved testimonial.

Besides tending cattle, Dobler paints pictures to sell to tourists. He also plays the hackbrett with a folkloric group.

In case you're wondering what a hackbrett is (and everybody does), it's a zitherlike instrument with 125 strings.

There are alpine peaks and high meadows

It takes Dobler more than an hour just to tune the infernal thing. Afterward he plays melodies that ring forth like a Swiss music box in action.

While Dobler fiddles away his time, Mrs. Dobler turns out hand-knit sweaters that she sells to visitors who gather to hear her husband play.

It is a fact that an Appenzeller seldom leaves home. You begin to understand why when you take in all its charms.

Chalets and farmhouses lie scattered across the mountainside. Wild flowers carpet the meadows in springtime and nights are bright with stars.

Visitors ride a cable car to the top of the Santis. In winter they ski and during summer they go fishing or hiking (the surrounding mountains provide three lakes and nearly 500 miles of trails).

All it takes are a pair of good shoes, a rod and a map.

As for the Appenzellers, they have no desire to change their lifestyle. What for? No one hurries. No one fusses.

Village shopkeepers sell hand-stitched embroidery, alpenhorns and other crafts.

Other Appenzellers produce cheeses and sausage and a liqueur that's created with 40 herbs and is nearly powerful enough to fuel a missile.

Of Appenzell's 10 hotels, high marks go to the Santis, the Lowen and the Hecht.

The Hecht, operated by sisters Maria and Regula Knechtle, accommodates up to 70 guests a night at $24 single and $48 double, breakfast included.

Up the road the proprietor of the 300-year-old Hotel Santis makes similar boasts (it is outside his hotel that Appenzellers gather for the open-air vote in springtime).

Visitors agree that Josef Heeb's Hotel Santis is the snuggest spot in all Appenzell, the rates ranging from $22 to $34 single and $44 to $68 double.

Lace curtains flutter at the windows and antiques crowd the guest room.

Born in Appenzell, innkeeper Heeb left home as a teenager to seek his fortunes in the capitals of Europe. Years later he returned to Appenzell, discovering a magic the cities failed to provide—contentment.

Now middle-aged, Heeb rides and skis and hikes. And at night he's lulled to sleep by church bells and each morning he is awakened by cowbells.

It makes little difference if it's Monday or Friday, June or January, Josef Heeb lives the good life.

And would you believe it, so say the ladies, do they.

Gold only part of Dawson City spirit

By EVELYN KIERAN

DAWSON CITY, Yukon — Brenda Caley had invited some friends over for dinner one evening, and the word that the ice was nearly breaking didn't deter her at all. The ice broke every year and normally, it is just a welcome sign that spring was on the way.

But this day, last May 9, the creaking, squeaking, groaning and moaning that always precede the break seemed louder then ever. About five o'clock the whole town wandered toward the river's edge to check. Everything seemed OK, with nothing very unusual, so everyone went home to dinner.

SERVICE'S CABIN

Gold rush poet Robert Service is remembered each summer as folk gather at his cabin

BRENDA'S PARTY was unusually festive. Spring surely was on the way, and after the almost endless winter at temperatures of 50 and 60 below, it was most welcome. Her guests, mostly as young as herself, enjoyed a fine meal and some good wine, and made music for several hours. It was an ordinary evening in the town that sits at the conflux of the Yukon and Klondike rivers, one of the prettiest sites in the whole Northwest.

DAWSON CITY came into existence when gold was first discovered on Bonanza Creek in 1896. For a while, the town flourished. It was not only the port city for shipping supplies in and gold out, but it was a rip-roaring, swinging, gold-mad place where the hardiest of the miners ate, drank, laughed, lied—and died.

At one time, the population numbered 30,000—mostly miners and the people who served them. Then came the bad times when the creeks seemed to be exhausted. And word came of more gold, this time along the Bering Sea. The miners moved on. The town dwindled to a mere handful of stout-hearted lovers of the wilderness.

FOR YEARS, nothing much happened in Dawson City. The fine, fancy hotels, gambling palaces and bars closed. The town took on the air of a ghost—buildings shuttered and crumbling, nobody caring.

Then someone realized that this funny, fading place in one of the most beautiful places on the globe was an important part of Canadian history. A movement to have it declared a national monument was organized. The Canadian government began allocating money for restoration and preservation of some historic buildings.

AND A NEW generation of young pioneers moved in. Some are just in love with the magnificent wilderness.

But others are aware that gold at over $300 (now $500) an ounce is worth facing the difficulties of reworking the piles of tailings along the creek beds. Old claims are being re-staked, reworked.

The town has been singing to the sound of saws cutting new timbers, of workmen raising new roof beams. The smell of paint and of fresh-turned earth is everywhere.

BUT LIFE still isn't easy. The rivers freeze solid in October and don't thaw until May. Temperatures freeze machinery, not to mention humans. And, although there is a good road to Whitehorse, it still is difficult to get supplies in and out.

Spring thaw is more than welcome.

Most of the town's 800 people went to bed fairly early that May evening. Then, at midnight, the ice floes jammed. With a roar that sounded as though the end or the world had come, the huge blocks of ice, which had been drifting slowly, backed into one another, piling up along the shore like toy blocks discarded by some bored giant.

WATER SPILLED over with such force the buildings along the shore were lifted from their very foundations and moved considerable distances inland. The town wakened and rushed for the safety of high ground, grabbing whatever valuables came easily to hand.

In the Arctic dawn, the damage seemed irreparable. Many of the buildings that had been on Main Street now were a hundred yards or more into town. Many were tumbled about like a box of matches shaken across the landscape.

FORTUNATELY, no lives were lost. Nor were many people hurt. But the shambles that greeted them was enough to make the stoutest heart despair. Calls for help went out as soon as lines were mended. And help arrived quickly.

The town began to dig out and help itself.

To everyone's amazement, Brenda Caley's dinner table, with the dishes still on it, had risen to the roof, then settled down again, and nothing was broken.

WE ARRIVED in Dawson not long after. The carpet at the lodge where we stayed still was drying out in the chilly sun. Mud still was fairly thick on the dirt roads. We wandered around the town to survey the damage.

One optimist, whose store had been moved a couple of hundred feet off its foundations, had hung out a sign: "Open for business at our new location." Another, a bookstore, noted it had "dirty books for sale." The proprietor had carefully wiped the mud from whatever volumes could be salvaged.

THE SUN shone. Some spring flowers were poking up in little gardens here and there.

People called cheerfully to one another, making arrangements to borrow tools, or help move a wayward fence.

All in all, there was very much a sense of "business as usual," and added to that, an indescribable air of community.

Dawson City has seen better days. But we'll bet it has struck a new gold streak in the spirit of its present-day citizens. It is still colorful, quaint, charming. But more than that, it is filled with a spirit of determination to stay and build something worthwhile for the long days ahead.

That beats a gold rush any day.

Senior housing officers named

Oak Bay high teacher Peter Adlem has been elected president of the Victoria Senior Citizen's Housing Society.

Other officers included Ted Hanman, vice president; Pauline Barker, secretary and Rick Senkler, treasurer.

Tom Horsley, Dave Davidson and Ken Wyatt, all of the South Van Isle Lions Club, were appointed directors.

These last three appointments reflect the society's recent involvement in a proposed housing project initiated by the Lion's club in the Langford area.

Initial approval for the project has been given by the provincial government, which in conjunction with the federal government will fund it. The next stage will be to find a suitable piece of property.

Current plans call for construction of a 50-unit lodge.

The society was formed in 1956 as a non-profit organziation to provide living accomodation at minimal cost for senior citizens.

Since then four low-cost apartment buildings have been built: the 26-suite Banfield Lodge on Styles Street, 38-suite Townley Lodge; Townley Street, 77-suite Esquimalt Lion's Lodge, Fleming Street, and the 100-suite Campbell Lodge, Collinson Street.

Holidays, hearing conflict

The public hearing on the proposed Broadmead shopping centre should be rescheduled because of a conflict with the annual school spring break, the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association says.

Many association members have made vacation plans for the period.

"I will be asking Saanich to choose a date more appropriate to our members," said association spokesman Peter Howe.

Howe questioned the reason for the scheduling of the public hearing calling it at least bad judgment.

The association is opposed to the proposal for the 174,000-square-foot shopping centre.

Road construction time limit relaxed

The one-year limit in which municipalities must complete highway projects or lose provincial grants has been relaxed, the municipal affairs ministry said Friday.

It said the one-year limit caused problems because some municipalities were unable to complete projects on time because of external circumstances including strikes or bad weather.

Regulations have been amended to allow municipalities to carry forward into the following year any inadvertently unexpended grant monies, the ministry said.

The highways road grants program provides up to $15 million annually.

Mail believed missing from Arbutus mailbox

Thieves broke into a mailbox at Haro and Arbutus Friday night and a quantity of mail is believed missing.

Saanich police said that residents who mailed income tax forms or other important documents in that box are advised to check to see the material has been received.

Education Minister Brian Smith will have a new assistant Monday morning — his 13-year-old son Christopher.

The youngster is participating in Take Your Child to Work week, sponsored by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

He will be introduced to the legislature at the start of Monday's sitting at 2 p.m.

During the week parents are being encouraged to take their children to their job site to give them a first-hand look at the working world.

About 30 local restaurants are making discount lunches available to parents and children participating in this program.

Tickets for the reduced rate on meals and a list of the restaurants can be obtained from the chamber office at 1020 Government.

Bus crashes to asylum

HAVANA (Reuter) — A bus crashed into the grounds of the Peruvian Embassy on Friday in what appears to be a successful bid by a number of Cubans for political asylum.

Armed Cuban guards were caught by surprise as the local transit bus swerved off a main road and came to a stop in front of the embassy, witnesses reported.

Swamped Victoria trustees eye empty Saanich school

Saanich and Victoria school districts may have to do some student swapping if they hope to provide efficient school services to developments in the North Quadra and Royal Oak areas.

A report of the Victoria school board planning committee determined that three Victoria schools — Northridge, Glanford and Lake Hill — are near capacity while Saanich school board recently closed Royal Oak school in the same area for lack of enrolment.

Planned developements in the area will add 1,300 more homes and 1,000 more students in the next 15 years the committee estimates.

It suggests that enough students be taken from the Victoria district and put into the Saanich district so that Royal Oak school can be reopened.

Unity Day: Ugandans have little to celebrate

By GREGORY JAYNES
New York Times

KAMPALA — Monday was National Unity Day in Uganda, a holiday to celebrate a quality the nation does not possess. Moreover, given present circumstances, it was difficult to distinguish that day from any other.

No one worked, but few people worked the day before. In the processing plants for coffee and sugar cane, two of the country's major crops, production on working days has been 5 percent of capacity. There are scarcely any automobiles on the roads, and Uganda has had little or no gasoline for months because it does not have the foreign exchange to buy fuel.

Throughout Kampala, the doors are closed on empty stores. It is a soft day, with marabou storks wheeling in the warm sky above the capital, as they do above anything dead or dying.

Idi Amin ran the country for eight years and ran it into the ground. A year ago, there were 45,000 Tanzanian soldiers in Uganda shooting their way toward Kampala and the liberation of the 13 million Ugandans. Also on this day a year ago, 41 exiled Ugandan politicians representing 20 anti-Amin organizations met in the northern Tanzanian town of Moshi to discuss Uganda's future after the fall of Kampala, which was to come on April 11.

The city is still falling. Gunfire is heard every night — sometimes all night. There are bodies in the streets in the mornings. Each house occupied by Europeans, including those of representatives of international aid organizations, is a repository of gas grenades and small arms. A curfew remains in effect from 10 p.m. to sunrise. Crime is everywhere, and no sane businessman wears a wristwatch to work anymore. Thieves take them at gunpoint.

The dissidents who met in Moshi a year ago formed an alliance called the Uganda National Liberation Front. Its first president and the first president of Uganda after the Amin regime was Yusufu Lule, an academic and lecturer. He lasted two months before incurring the disfavor of the Tanzanians, who made his ascendancy possible, and losing popularity in the front. He was replaced by Godfrey Binaisa, the attorney general before the Amin regime.

The front's plan was to have general elections in June 1981. In the interim, the president and a 127-member National Consultative Council would be responsible for the herculean task of reconstruction. However, Binaisa and the Council have been unable to get along, and the Council has a several times threatened to vote no confidence in the president, thereby dissolving his government.

In a speech commemorating the meeting at Moshi, Binaisa announced that elections would be this year. Moving the election up was regarded as a concession to Ugandans dissatisfied with the lack of progress. The move also reflected the president's belief that it is impossible to get things done with an unelected Council of politically ambitious men representing almost every major ideology.

Binaisa will be a candidate for president, as will former president Lule, now in exile in London. Former president Milton Obote, who was overthrown by Field Marshal Amin, has announced that he will return from exile in Tanzania with the blessing of that nation's president, Julius Nyerere, to run. At least five members of the council, some with their own armies, have presidential aspirations.

Meanwhile, the Tanzanian occupation force of 20,000 is beginning to pull out. In the year they have been here, the Tanzanians have been seen as both blessing and curse. They kept the country from total anarchy but have been as responsible for crime as the Ugandan looters in the euphoria after the dictator fled. About 10,000 troops are withdrawing this month, leaving behind a trained Ugandan Army and police force of 5,800. Binaisa has asked that a Commonwealth force be sent here but has not received an answer.

A member of the Kampala city council, a local businessman who declined to be identified, said the pervasive view in the country was that a "force with a different pigment than us should come here."

N.Z. trains collide

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Two persons were killed and more than 50 were injured when a packed commuter train and a shunting locomotive collided in the Wellington railway yard.

The commuter train was carrying 500 city workers and school children, while the locomotive was hauling empty coaches. They crashed head on.

Anniversaries

McLaren — 65th

It is with great pleasure to announce the 65th wedding anniversary of Mary and Stan McLaren, 1150 Rockland Avenue.

Mary and Stan were married in the Congregation Baptist Church, [illegible] Reverend S[illegible] on [illegible] 1, 1915. The maid of honour was her sister, Mrs. Helen Thomas, (who will be in attendance.)

Mr. McLaren is Victoria born going back to two generations and worked with the B.C. Electric as a street car conductor, until the B.C. Hydro took over and he carried on, until his retirement in 1964 serving 38 years in all.

Mrs. McLaren was born in Dundee, Scotland and came to Canada with her family in 1911.

They had one son Stanley who predeceased them in 1978.

A dinner will be held in their honour at the Holyrood House where they will be greeted by their relatives and friends.

UPLANDS SEAVIEWS

A truly outstanding character residence combining classic tudor styling with a superb Uplands location. The 1.2-acre site is beautifully landscaped, with circular driveway winding through the mature garden. Inside the stately oak panelled reception hall opens to the gracious living room, formal dining room; both with commanding 180 degree views of the water. A large, bright kitchen, charming den and guest powder room complete the main floor. The open staircase leads to four large bedrooms, all with access to ensuites; the master bedroom enjoys magnificent views, generous closet and dressing room areas. The high, bright basement is extremely usable, with billiard room, full bath and potential for much more. Seldom does such a unique property combining so many exceptional features become available for purchase. $435,000. Exclusive.

UPLANDS INDOOR POOL

A unique residence featuring excellent family accommodation. It combines the subtle grace of soft beige carpets, grasscloth, dark oak parquet and old brick arches, yet lends itself to the lifestyle of an active family. Just a few of the features: huge family kitchen, separate formal dining room, den with fireplace, living room overlooking the pool, master suite with private access to sauna and pool, family room, playroom. Four bedrooms plus inlaw or staff suite. The pool enclosure is fabulous, with vaulted, sky-lit ceiling, barbecue, and a 44 ft. long glass windowed wall which opens to the patio giving an "outdoor" feeling for summer swimming. Exceptional at $345,000.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

I WOULD LIKE TO EXPRESS my thanks to all our friends for so many kind messages of sympathy to us for the loss of my dear wife, Illy Bauersachs. Rudy and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DERRY — In loving memory of my dear husband, Richard, who passed away March 29, 1976.

Greatly missed and always remembered by his wife, Edith, family and friends.

"Nothing can ever take away the love a heart holds dear. Fond memories linger every day."

God in his wisdom

The boon
his love had given

And though the body
slumbers here

The soul is safe in heaven.

309 IN MEMORIAM

FLYNN - In loving memory of my husband, Jim, who passed away March 28, 1979.

Looking back with tenderness,
Along the path he trod,
I bless the years I had with him,
And leave the rest to God.
What would I give to clasp his hand,
His happy face to see,
To hear his voice and see his smile,
That meant so much to me.
If all this world were mine to give,
I'd give it, yes and more,
If I could see my loving husband,
Come smiling through the door.
So many things have happened,
Since he was called away,
So many things to share with him,
Always remembered and sadly missed, Dora.

THOMSON - In loving memory of my sister Evelyn Elizabeth Olsen Watchorn Thomson, who passed away March 29th, 1979.

At twilight when twilight hour draws near,
And sunset flames the sky,
I think of you, dear sister,
And the happy days gone by.
Thoughts of you come drifting back
Within my dreams to stay,
To know that you are resting
When the twilight ends the day.
Edith Davis.

THOMSON - Cherished memories of Evelyn Elizabeth Thomson. Beloved Aunt and great Aunt, who passed away March 29th, 1979.

O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
The joys we shared together
Are the memories we hold dear,
And the happiness you gave us
Keeps you forever near.
You never really left us
Nor have you travelled far,
Just entered God's beautiful garden
Remembered with fond affection by Ken, Margaret, Allison & Christopher Messerschmidt.

WEST — In loving memory of my husband Terry F. H. West who passed away March 29, 1976.

"Treasured memories keep you near,
As time unfolds each year.
No need of words, except to say
Still loved, still missed in every way."
—Lovingly wife Clair and family.

WILSON - In memory of my husband, Bill, who passed away March 30th, 1979.
Always remembered by his loving wife Jeanne and son Bill.

Employment up in industry

OTTAWA (CP) — The industrial composite index of employment in January rose 0.2 per cent over December to 148.4, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The index, a measure of employment in all sectors except agriculture, fishing, education and services, showed gains for all regions except British Columbia, which declined, and Quebec, which was unchanged.

Mining, manufacturing and construction industries showed declines while transportation and industry services increased.

The index of average weekly earnings increased 0.8 per cent with all sectors except mining, communications and construction showing an increase.

Average weekly hours also increased in mining and manufacturing.

Margaret robbery victim

OTTAWA (CP) — A thief broke into Margaret Trudeau's home Friday night and made off with an expensive fur coat, some camera equipment, cash and a 22-carat gold earring.

Ottawa police said the prime minister's wife reported the robbery at 9:30 p.m. after she returned from an early evening engagement.

The burglar cut through a screen door on the rear patio of Mrs. Trudeau's house, police said.

City to test propane fuel savings on five trucks

Five city trucks will be converted to burn propane instead of gasoline this year.

The move is being made as an energy conservation demonstration project, Ald. Robin Blencoe announced Friday.

Blencoe, chairman of council's public works committee, said he will ask his colleagues to approve the plan next week.

Preliminary estimates show about $200 a year will be saved through the switchover from gas to propane.

Initial conversion costs are $1,150 per vehicle but the gear is removable and can be switched to other vehicles.

Propane now costs 25 cents less than an equivalent gallon of gasoline, Blencoe said.

As the price of gasoline goes up, there will be further savings to the city.

The vehicles targeted for conversion are small and medium-sized trucks used in the public works department which record high mileage in a year.

Conversion has other advantages, Blencoe said in a statement.

"It is cleaner and more efficient than gasoline and is less likely to explode in accidents," he said.

"Its supply is more assured than that of gasoline because it is a byproduct of petroleum refining."

HEAD LIFEGUARD and LIFEGUARDS for the
PARKS DEPARTMENT
City of Victoria

Rate of Pay — Head Lifeguard — $8.56 per hour
Lifeguard — $8.36 per hour

IN THESE TIMES, IT'S EVEN MORE IMPORTANT THAN EVER TO READ EVERY WORD ON THIS PAGE

If you're ever remotely considered the purchase of home furnishings now or in the future, what The Traders are doing this month-end could be of major importance to you.

We've just completed the best February in our history. That's the good news! The bad news is, March started out slowly, but, we have over a half-million dollars worth of unsold inventory that is not scheduled in this year's plan. Our style of doing business demands we stay fluid and have space to take opportunity buys that have made The Traders one of the largest volume single floor operations in the country. So, in The Traders tradition, here come buys that truly earn the superlative "Fantastic"!

Give a listen.

We're selling out Standard Furniture at 50¢ or less of the dollar we'd like. The entire selection of bedroom furniture, desks and hutches are being offered at ridiculous prices. Please do not confuse this furniture with Standard Furniture on Yates Street; we're talking about Standard Furniture of Alabama, an extremely large manufacturer of bedroom furniture. Good selection, nicely styled, economy prices by high volume mass production. Example a 7-piece bedroom suite in white or fruitwood finish, triple dresser size with twin mirrors, 5-drawer chest, 54/60" headboard and two 2-drawer night tables should sell at $1098. While they last only $499.95. Probably their best seller is this Cannonball Style bedroom suite which should sell at $1598 clearing at $798 or check over the 6-piece modern bedroom suite going at $289.95 complete with two night tables. Desks, great value too! While they last only $89.95. Don't be disappointed, do come early please.

It's the Pits! That's the trade name for sectionals with ottoman(s). When you haven't got them seems you should; when you do you wonder if you sell enough of them to warrant a space. Our best seller is now featured with two big ottomans, in everybody's favorite 100% acrylic fabric lists out at $2998. Going out at $1598. The Master Craft Luxury suite in a flamestitch pattern with one Ottoman lists out at $1748. is going out at $799.95. Large 2-piece Sectionals by Master Craft designs in good choice of decorator fabrics list out at $1478 to $1538 depending on grade of fabric, also being cleared out at $799.95. Please note that all Master Craft suites come with a Lifetime Warrantee on all frames, regardless of the price you paid. Should mention the Style #31 Master Craft sofa and loveseat, we thought it would be a winner, but we haven't sold enough to warrant its space. Choice of colors on hand clearing at $568 for this sofa and loveseat. The list was $1268. They're really great! There are a lot more, we just cannot begin to mention them all here, come early and come often, because we cannot get them all out on display.

From Marlock Mirror Company, they do a really great job on decorator mirrors, framed singles, doubles and triples. All mirrors with gold frames are for the first time ever being offered at 30% off. We have a couple with chromed frames. These are marked at $188. Clearing at $29.95. (Some chrome plate is peeling off the frame). Speaking of mirrors, we saved the best for last, this Traditional framed twin connecting plate glass mirror from Riverside is a great deal at $249.95. We have a few extas and want to clear them out at $99.95.

Call it an etagere, a bookcase, or an open curio, but most of all call it the bargain of the year. From Bush "Occasion II" is perfect harmony in chrome and glass. Occasion II solves the "where-to-put-it-without-looking-cluttered" space problem. Great value at $149.95. Sells extremely well at $99.95. You'll want more than one, while they last only $74.95. Matching planters, bunch tables, cocktail tables and end tables in stock, also at Special Sale prices.

Albert, our warehouse manager swears these cocktail tables have been fooling around at night! That's the only explanation we can come up with as to why they've multiplied. Now we have all these sofa tables and square cocktail tables and no end tables. But in The Traders tradition, out they go! You're the winner too because we decided not to take 25% off or even ⅓ off the regular list price, we thought that 50% off would be super. But, we saved the best to the last . . . yes, there are some complete sets too! Come in early for the best selection. Example, this Mediterranean Style series your choice 1-tier cocktail table, hexagon or square 2-shelf lamp tables are good value at $69.95 each, great value at $49.95, a give-away at $39.95 each, but we'll let you steal these at $33.33 each while they last!

Riverside "Nostalgia or Keepsakes" was the group that swept North America. Riverside is one of the country's leading manufacturers of fine furniture with a million, four hundred thousand square feet of manufacturing space and currently manufacture over 800 different home furnishing items. Listed here are a few items that we are clearing to make space for new items due to arrive soon. This offering is on the Great Hill Road collection, and believe me . . . each piece is truly a work of art combining the Traditional skill of early furniture makers with the stylish craftsmanship of today that only Riverside can offer. Featuring solid oak and oak veneers, antique brass hardware and porcelain knobs, plate glass mirrors, genuine handmade leaded glass, exclusive long lasting multi-step Golden Oak finish and newspaper print drawer bottoms. Items clearing now are Hall Tree $549.95 list, now going at $299.95. Barrell roll top desk complete with matching oak swivel desk chair, $2267.95 list, now going at $1250.95. Oak bar stools with swivel seats $269.95 list, going at $159. Party set, featuring 42" single pedestal round table & 4 armchairs on Sheppard casters. List was $2198 — now going at $1298. Upright bookcase with drawer and lighted deck, doors with leaded glass. List was $899.95, now going at $499.95. The ultimate is this bedroom group including Master dresser with hutch mirror, legged chest and queen-size lighted hutch headboard with leaded glass doors. List was $4498, now going at only $2498. Ships desk on casters lists at $1298 clearing at $649.95. All items are floor samples only while they last.

What's happening in your bedroom? Nothing personal, of course, but I happen to know a "Legacy" . . . that's available. You can have her every night, for the rest of your life! Riverside brought out this fabulous group of bedroom furniture and lavished their skill and detail on this traditionally elegant bedroom set. You get the triple dresser with twin framed mirrors, beautiful man's door chest, queen headboard plus two matching night stands. Good value at $2899. It's Super Value at $1899 but we have one we'll sacrifice for only $1499.95 complete.

Are all our buys good? Of course not! But we honestly believe that this is the opportunity of a lifetime to own fine furniture at prices that would have been super years ago! In this era of inflation and high prices, "fantastic" is an apt adjective. On with the buys!

We talked about all kinds of bedroom suites; but how about mattresses! here too, we always strive to have the best along with the best values in town. No wonder . . . we sell more mattresses by accident than many people do on purpose. More reasons why . . . we offer mattresses by King Koil, these mattresses are all fire resistant and King Koil Spinal Guard were rated best in U.S. Consumer's Reports. Their best queen-size "The Majesty" is a super nice mattress and box spring unit. It comes with a 15-year warrantee and worth every cent of $899.95 but, $699.95 is an even better deal, so we decided $599.95 would be fantastic. Now to sweeten the pot even more, we've decided to throw in (at NO EXTRA CHARGE) a heavy duty $48.95 adjustable rug-roller frame and a brass blanket rack while these last. What a deal! We also stock many, many other mattress units by Spring Air and Therapedic. Best selection and the best values in town, we think. If it's king-size or thee quarter size you want we've got a good selection too!

Speaking of king-size — we can make your bedroom the best night spot in town, and at quite a price. Here's what you'll get in this king size package deal, it's the new look with wicker, cane and brass traditional style with stain and mar resistant tops, triple dresser with framed twin mirrors, a chest of five drawers, big king-size headboard with a 15-year guaranteed high quality mattress, two box springs, lifetime guaranteed heavy duty king-size rug-roller frame and to complete your pad, we're including two 2-drawer matching night tables, a pair of tri-light bedroom lamps, and a floral arrangement for your dresser. How much is all this luxury going to cost? Not much, so they won't last long! Normally we'd like to get $2500 for this group — but we'll take $1198. Complete for a quick sale.

Speaking of quickies — somebody has been playing games, but, not on our games sets. We bought a whole bunch last fall of the best quality available. These should sell in the $1798 price range, we offered them on sale at $1459 at Christmas time. We still have a very good choice of colors in hard-wearing fabrics and decorator tapestry too. Sorry we won't hold these any longer, we won't even ask $1098 or $998 — we've knocked them to as low as $798. Don't be sorry, hurry in quickly for the best selection.

Sofas, loveseats and chairs! Boy do we have them! Practically every color, every style, every size imaginable! We could fill this newspaper with all the gooddeals we could offer you, and we'd still have some left over. So, we just have to ask you to come in and judge for yourself! We will tell you this much, we're in the best mood in town (by far) and we promise not to push you, as a matter of fact, we hope that we don't have to make you wait too long. Check our store hours, try to pick a time maybe when you have lots of time available, we do have interior decorating and design service available at your disposal. We do take trade-ins and we do offer easy budget terms . . . we call it "On The Spot Financing!"

Need a dinette? We carry the world-famous . . . Douglas of California line; we have another carload due to arrival real soon. Meanwhile, you really should look over the dinettes left from the previous carload . . . We're clearing these at . . . at least 25% off the 1979 prices; still a pretty good selection too. Douglas of California is the world's largest manufacturer of luxury dinettes.

Off your rocker? Maybe it's because you don't have one! We can take care of that! We sure have a big selection of rockers and swivel rockers. Example — 100% Acrylic good-wearing fabric. Reg. List on these $279.95. They were an extremely good seller on sale at $189.95. Now we're offering the last of these at only $139.95.

You may think we've listed these incredible buys just to get you to come in to The Traders. You're right! We have so many great buys, we could fill this newspaper for a week, just to tell you about them. So, we'll have to let this ad tempt you in. You won't be disappointed! And that's a promise.

We're easy to find, next to Chinese Village facing Woodwards. We have oodles of free parking right at the door, wide open seven days a week, most nights till 9 p.m. We're locally owned and operated by Vic and Toni, and we're always here to help you. There are some rules — please look over the goods you purchase, we want you to be happy and pleased with your purchase, all sales final please — first come, first served. And for maximum savings, arrange your own delivery — or — warehouse delivery service is available at a reasonable charge. Personal shopping only please.

Do your home, yourself, and frankly — us, a favour, by attending The Traders greatest clearance sale ever!

See you soon! Thanks, Vic and Toni

"akamai"

(Hawaiian word for clever or smart)

Most kama'ainas (oldtimers or native Hawaiians) agree that malihinis (newcomers to Hawaii) who fly to their islands in the summer with Holidays by Wardair have plenty akamai.

Why? Because Wardair gives you more value for your money and because summer is the most economical time to visit Hawaii.

Holidays by Wardair can book your ABC flight, arrange hotel accommodation to suit your budget at one of 48 hotels and even look after your car rental.

During the flight, you'll enjoy "Wardair Class" service – delicious meals, individually served, hot from the galley with imported wines and liqueurs – all at no additional cost.

And after you arrive in Hawaii, the "Wardair Class" treatment doesn't stop. There are three Holidays by Wardair service centres in Waikiki to help you book tours and shows, answer your questions and show you how to save money on sight-seeing, shopping and dining.

In fact, Holidays by Wardair makes malihinis feel like Kama'ainas in no time at all. So this summer, be akamai . . . fly Wardair Class to . . .

Carter bars all exports for Olympics

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is officially barring the export of U.S. goods and technology to Moscow for the Summer Olympics, a move that underscores his intent to oppose U.S. participation in the Games.

"It is the firm policy of the U.S. government that no United States team will participate in the Moscow Games," Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick said Friday. "It would therefore be inconsistent for us to permit the shipment of goods or technology for use in those Games."

The export ban will affect more than $13 million in items ranging from souvenirs to track and field equipment, and from computers to athletic uniforms, said Homer Moyer, the department's general counsel.

It also means that NBC will be prohibited from making further payments or exports under its contracts to televise the games. The network was reported to have signed a contract to pay about $87 million for rights to televise 150 hours of the Moscow events.

NBC, following Carter's action, said it would be "guided by the policies and regulations of the United States government."

Previously, it announced it would not exercise telecast rights if a U.S. team failed to participate in the Games.

Despite the U.S. blackout of the Games, a spokesman for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. said Friday that Canada will not be affected by the NBC pullout.

"The CBC has Canadian rights to the Games and we are in no way reliant on NBC coverage or American satellites," said Cecil Smith, a CBC information officer in Toronto.

The official ban is welcomed by many U.S. companies, upset with Carter's earlier call that they voluntarily withhold the goods.

Earlier Friday, the White House issued a statement saying the official ban was due specifically to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"The continuing interference by the Soviet Union in the internal affairs of that country constitute an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy and economy of the United States," the statement said.

Brother hangs pregnant hostage guard

TEHRAN (CP) — A female student was hanged by her brother because she was pregnant by one of the Americans being held as hostage at the U.S. embassy in Tehran, the Tehran newspaper Kayhan reported today.

A spokesman for the militants holding the hostages confirmed the group was aware of the case and was "prepared to hand him (the hostage) over to the revolutionary prosecutor's office to be questioned."

The student spokesman said the hostage was a "military man," but neither the students nor the newspaper identified him.

The student militants said the woman had been a member of the Revolutionary Guard detachment assigned to guard the embassy following the February, 1979, revolution which toppled the shah.

The head of the Revolutionary Guard detachment was later jailed for working closely with the Americans.

The newspaper identified the woman only as "A.A.," a 23-year-old language student at Tehran's teachers' college.

Her brother, identified as Abdulnasir A., a Baluchistan student, turned himself into police after the hanging, reported to have occurred Thursday.

The newspaper printed a photograph it said was the slain student showing a woman with her head turned away from the camera and marks on her neck. Another photograph showed a man it identified as her brother, accompanied by police.

A fetus was found in the woman's womb and blood tests are being carried out, the newspaper reported.

Her brother was quoted as saying he had come to Tehran for the Iranian New Year's holiday last week and saw that his sister was pregnant.

He had asked who did it and she at first told him it was a taxi driver, the newspaper said. But after he fought with the taxi driver, she changed her story, telling him it was an American hostage.

She had told him the hostage "fooled" her and she became pregnant.

The hanging incident now is being investigated by the prosecutor's office.

The newspaper quoted the brother as saying: "The spy must be executed. I only killed my sister in order to save the honor of my family."

Shah 'stable' after op

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The deposed shah of Iran was reported in "stable condition and doing very well" after doctors removed his enlarged, cancerous spleen at a military hospital near Cairo.

A medical bulletin said the operation, supervised by Houston, Tex., surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey, "was completed in a satisfactory condition" Friday night and Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was receiving intensive care.

Egyptian armored cars and soldiers ringed the hospital, where the shah has been in a second-floor suite since he arrived Monday from Panama.

80 lashes in public face British woman

LONDON (AP) — A British surgeon's wife has been sentenced to a public flogging in Saudi Arabia for contravening the strict alcohol laws there, the British foreign office said early today.

A spokesman said that Mrs. Penelope Arnot was sentenced to 80 lashes by a court in Jidda for serving alcoholic drinks at a party at which a British nurse and Dutchman died.

Mrs. Arnot's husband, Richard, has served five months in prison of a one-year sentence for the same offence, the spokesman said.

The foreign office is trying to save Mrs. Arnot from the ordeal.

"We have had news of the sentence but we don't regard the case as settled and we are in touch with the Saudi government," the spokesman added.

The sentences imposed on the couple arose from a party at their rented flat last May, when 23-year-old nurse Helen Smith and a young Dutch construction worker died after falling from a fifth-floor window.

The surgeon began a $39,000-a-year post in Jidda in September, 1978.

Queen owed more

LONDON (UPI) — The royal family doesn't often point this out because it's considered bad form, but it actually gives the nation more than it gets back in the allowances paid to Queen Elizabeth, Princess Anne, Queen Mother Elizabeth and others who perform public duties.

This year the Crown Estate Commissioners expect to pay some $19.8 million into public funds, more than three times the amount returned to the royals.

Royal finances are sometimes wilfully misunderstood by critics of the monarchy. King George III gave his estates to the nation in return for a guaranteed income, known as the Civil List. The estate has grown and prospered, as land in private hands has done, over the generations and is now a huge earner.

If George III had kept the estates directly under the sovereign, it has been pointed out, Queen Elizabeth would be able to support the entire royal establishment and have a fat surplus instead of depending on the bounty of Parliament.

Vigils recall TMI mishap

The Associated Press

Armed with signs proclaiming "No More Three Mile Islands" and "Nuclear Waste is Forever," hundreds of people from New Jersey to Arizona marked the anniversary Friday of the worst commercial nuclear accident in U.S. history. Scores of them were arrested.

About 100 metres from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Middletown, Pa., 200 people began a candlelight vigil at 4 a.m. Friday, the same time when a number of mechanical breakdowns and human errors resulted in the March 28, 1979, accident.

Overheating and loss of cooling water brought the reactor close to a meltdown and caused some release of radioactive gas.

In a televised debate on nuclear energy in Harrisburg, Pa., Representative Edward Markey, a Massachusetts Democrat, said:

"The people of America and the people of Harrisburg don't trust the experts any longer. The experts don't have any credibility. Nuclear power is a failure and doesn't have a future."

But Dr. Roger Linneman of Radiation Management Control in Philadelphia argued low doses of radiation have not been shown to be hazardous. "The world has been radioactive for millions of years," he said. "The human race has developed in spite of it or because of it."

Anti-nuclear groups in Connecticut, Nebraska, Texas, New York, Michigan, Ohio, Missouri, Arizona and Tennessee held marches, rallies and vigils Friday to commemorate the Three Mile Island anniversary.

In Parsippany, N.J., 67 of the 200 people who rallied peacefully outside at General Public Utilities Corp., which owns the Pennsylvania plant, were arrested on trespassing charges.

"We want to bring the message home," explained demonstrator Sue Aronoff. "GPU trespasses on our lives every day and radiation knows no bounds."

Spud pickets pull out

HOULTON, Me. (AP) — Maine potato farmers early Saturday called an end to their blockade of border crossing points into New Brunswick after Vice-President Walter Mondale agreed to head a special committee to study their problems.

Standing in the back of a pickup truck, Maine Agriculture Commissioner Stewart Smith and John Martin, speaker of the state house of representatives, told about 200 farmers that the committee would draft a position paper on alternative solutions to the industry's problems by next Wednesday.

Smith and Martin offered no specifics, but said Mondale would decide by Friday which alternatives to put into effect.

The farmers, who began their blockade of northern Maine border crossings at dawn Thursday to demand an end to imports of Canadian potatoes, immediately began hauling away the tractors and trucks that had been blocking the border at Houlton and at nine other crossings. One crossing had been blocked Friday with a 15-ton pile of potatoes.

San Salvador at flash point

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — Tense inhabitants of San Salvador were stocking up on emergency supplies today, fearful of another wave of violence in El Salvador following Sunday's funeral of slain Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero.

Leftist organizations have said they plan to mobilize more than 200,000 people to pay final homage to Romero, a champion of the poor and oppressed who was shot and killed Monday while celebrating mass.

The governing civilian-military junta in this Central American country has appealed to church dignitaries who will be present at the ceremony to do everything possible to maintain peace and order.

Government sources said junta members met Friday with military chiefs and asked them to use utmost restraint in crowd control. "The situation is so tense that even a car backfire might cause a riot," the sources said.

At one stage Friday it looked as if the junta faced even more problems after three government ministers resigned and rumors spread throughout the capital that leftist leader Juan Chacon had been killed.

Education Minister Eduardo Colindres, Economics Minister Oscar Mejivar and Deputy Agriculture Minister Jorge Villacort resigned in protest at the junta's inability to halt the almost daily violence, despite pleas from their colleagues not to quit at such an uncertain period.

Word of Chacon's death began to spread after U.S. Ambassador Robert White reported it at a meeting of the American Chamber of Commerce. White said he had been told of the death by two top government officials.

Underground shut in gang protest

LONDON (AP) — London subway workers walked off their jobs today, shutting down the city's vast underground rail network for 24-hours to protest their lack of protection in the face of a growing wave of gang attacks at stations and on trains.

Subway unions called the strike after an engineer was attacked during fighting between gangs of young thugs who smashed up a train March 14 at Neasden, in northwest London.

Officials said it was the first total shutdown of the underground, as the subway is known, since a nine-day general strike in 1926.

TRIUMPH AT WYK AAN ZEE

World Junior Champion Yasser Seirawan of Seattle and Grandmaster Walter Browne of Berkeley tied for first honors in January's Wyk aan Zee Tournament in Holland. They both scored 10 points out of 13, 1½ points ahead of their nearest competitor in a field of outstanding players. Seirawan's victory assured him of a Grandmaster title and included a win against the U.S.S.R.'s Victor Korchnoi, who finished third:

U.S. charter boat ban boon to B.C.

By AL FORREST

Local marina owners today said a federal fisheries order Friday banning U.S. charter fishing boats from B.C. waters will mean millions of dollars in extra revenues for local industry.

It may also end the controversy over whether the big, factory-style U.S. boats are taking more than their fair share of B.C. salmon.

The ban was announced in Vancouver by Dr. Wally Johnson, director general of the department of fisheries and oceans, Pacific region.

The U.S. has prohibited Canadian charter vessels in its waters.

Starting immediately, Americans — other than those who use their own, licensed "family boats" — will have to use B.C. boats and docks for fishing excursions.

This means they will be buying local supplies, hiring B.C. guides and frequently staying in Vancouver Island hotels.

In addition, it will be easier to check on whether they are keeping within the possession limit of 25 pounds of processed fish — or eight salmon, more than 12 inches long.

Last summer B.C. fishermen angrily charged that American charter boats were catching more than the allowed limits of salmon, processing it on board and sailing home with it or flying it out of the country on seaplanes.

Marina operators said the ban on large vessels was long overdue because of the ban on B.C. charter boats in the U.S.

"We have been looking forward to this decision for some time," said Angus Matthews of Oak Bay Marina.

"This will be a big boost for local industry."

Rob Waters, manager of Pedder Bay Marina, said Canadians have been concerned about the growing number of Americans who flew into B.C. waters and boarded a U.S. charter vessel for a quick fishing excursion.

"They would process salmon on board and ship it out of the country as quickly as they could. With the price of fish that was a valuable catch and it was difficult to check up on them."

Waters said the decision is timely because there will be a halt to sport fishing for at least one month off Oregon and Washington this summer to give commercial fishermen there a chance for a larger catch.

This will result in a larger-than-usual number of American sport fishermen coming into B.C. at the height of the fishing season.

Kevin Storrie, a guide and operator of a fishing gear store in Campbell River said the new ruling will be a boon to business.

And guide Gary Dewling agreed the ban probably can improve business here because American tourists will be forced to use Canadian boats and guides.

Bryon Armstrong, owner of Painter's Lodge applauded the ban but expressed concern Americans might be able to spot a possible loophole in the new law.

"Will this mean a U.S. charter company can form a company in Canada? It's not a costly procedure to set up a corporation and register vessels in B.C."

Rig search called off

STAVANGER, Norway (UPI) — The air search for survivors of the world's worst oil rig disaster was called off today with a feared death toll of 124 people.

Of the 213 rig workers aboard the Alexander Keilland "floating hotel" which capsized in a storm Thursday, 89 survived, 39 have been found dead and 85 were still missing.

One body was found today and two were spotted inside the rig but could not be reached by divers.

Six helicopters and two surveillance planes swept repeatedly over the area Friday but returned to base today. The 10,105-ton, pentagon-shaped rig was moored 175 miles southwest of Stavanger.

Of 40 ships that scoured the area around the overturned rig Friday, only 20 remained today and it was expected that many of these would not be used when the search resumes Sunday.

Only two or three of the 39 bodies have been identified, a spokesman for the rescue operation said.

The leg of the rig which sheared off, causing the accident, will be towed into Stavanger Sunday, to be examined by experts trying to find out why the Alexander Keilland capsized.

"Our judgment is there's very little likelihood of life on board the Kielland at this moment," said Forrest C. Morgen, drilling and production manager for the Phillips Petroleum Co., the rig's operator.

Morgen said a last hope the men had been able to survive in air pockets inside the concrete structure was dashed when divers found most of the windows had been smashed.

Divers tapped the sunken superstructure hoping to hear signs of life.

There was no reply.

Most of those on board when one of the rig's support legs snapped, causing the structure to topple over and sink in hurricane force winds Thursday night, were Norwegians.

As darkness fell Friday and the winds whipped up again only the broken leg and the four pontoons, like a giant elephant's four feet, were visible above the choppy waves.

No one could survive in the icy churning waters for more than two or three minutes without special gear, rescue officials said.

Constable guilty of assault

A county court jury Friday found Sidney RCMP Constable Grant Bottrell, 29, guilty of two charges of assault causing bodily harm.

Bottrell will be sentenced May 2.

The charges were laid in connection with injuries to a man being escorted to the detachment last May 1.

David Dean Krenbrink, 23, was treated for a broken cheekbone and head injury.

Krenbrink claimed Bottrell struck him with a wooden nightstick, then kicked him.

The jury retired at 2:10 p.m. after hearing a two-hour, 50-minute charge by Judge Leslie Cashman, and a review of evidence and submissions by counsel.

At 3:55 the jury returned for further re-instruction and retired again shortly after 4 p.m.

The jury finally brought in its verdict after midnight.

Volcano spits out boulders

COUGAR, Wash. (AP) — Volcanic activity on Mount St. Helens subsided early today after rocks and boulders were lobbed hundreds of metres into the air and soot was deposited on the ground as far as 80 kilometres away.

Glen Izette of Denver, Colo., a U.S. Geological Survey geologist, said a plume seen rising from the volcano through cloud cover Friday night was gone by the time he went up in an airplane for a reconnaissance flight at 12:30 a.m. He said the 2,950-metre volcano remains hidden behind clouds.

Throughout the three-hour flight, Izette said he saw no sign of further eruptions. He added that it appeared to be the longest quiet period for Mount St. Helens since Thursday.

Asked whether the sudden quiet meant a more substantial outburst could be in the works, Izette said: "Some volcanos are characterized by that . . . a long rest period, followed by a more intense episode."

After 123 years of silence, the volcano put on a lively show Thursday and Friday without doing any reported damage.

"All day long the old beast has just perked along, like a coffee pot," Tom Sayre, a U.S. Forest Service officer in Vancouver, Wash., said Friday.

No injuries or damage to property were reported.

Dan Miller of the U.S. Geological Survey's Volcanic Hazard Project said he saw rocks and boulders popping from a crater that had opened Thursday near the summit. The material, most of it about one metre in diameter, soared up through a 150-metre cloud cover, then dropped back to within 200 metres of the crater.

Sayre said scientists would continue to monitor the mountain on the weekend while roads remained closed near the peak, located 80 kilometres north-northeast of Portland, Ore. He said roads had been clogged with sightseers.

Visit the stars

Bette Midler is a strong candidate for the Academy Award for best actress this year.

She was known mainly as a singer until she was given the starring role in The Rose, a story based very loosely on the life of Janis Joplin.

Set in the late 1960s, the movie evokes a troubled era and Midler won raves for her convincing portrait.

Ironicly, she has had difficulty making her way as an actress and once took a year of psychoanalysis when she was unable to get any roles.

As a singer, however, she has always done well.

Because of her impact in The Rose it would be no real surprise if she upset favored Sally Field for the Oscar.

Readers who correctly predict the Oscar winners for best actress, actor and movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood in an annual contest sponsored by the Victoria Times and VI*90.

Dairy prices to jump

OTTAWA (CP) - Retail prices for butter, cheese and other dairy products will be increased because of increased payments to dairy farmers announced Friday by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

Butter will increase 3.6 cents a pound and skim powder about two cents a pound. Other manufactured dairy products such as cheese, yogurt, cottage cheese and ice cream will also rise.

The price for fluid milk is not affected because it is controlled by provincial milk marketing boards.

But producers of industrial milk — used to manufactured dairy products — will start receiving an extra 38 cents a hundredweight from processors starting Tuesday.

Super cop versus super thief saga

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The 13-month saga of a super cop dogging the trail of a super thief ended this week when John Arthur MacLean went to prison for 3,000 burglaries that netted him $133 million in jewels.

"I didn't feel any great elation after I arrested him," said Detective Arthur McLellan. "I enjoyed working against a pro, and John is the top pro. He's the super thief. It was the most challenging case I've ever worked."

For McLellan, a Fort Lauderdale robbery detective with 17 years experience, John Arthur MacLean presented a supreme challenge.

For openers, MacLean has an IQ of 167. He's an electronics genius, an experienced pilot, a skilled driver of high-speed boats, cars and motorcycles, a meticulous planner and an expert appraiser of fine jewelry.

"In 6½ years, he committed 3,000 burglaries and was responsible for $133 million in thefts along the eastern seaboard from the Florida Keys to Maine," McLellan said. "He also did a few jobs around Sarasota, Bradenton and Tampa.

"The only thing John would take was jewelry or money, and sometimes an antique gun. He wouldn't touch silver or paintings — just fine jewelry — and he was fastidious enough that it would be two or three days before most people knew they had been hit."

His biggest single haul was $5.8 million worth of jewelry from the "One Of A Kind" jewelry store in Provincetown, Cape Cod, in July of 1978.

MacLean, 33, lived well on the fruit of his crimes.

He owned a $100,000 vacation home in Venlehaven, Maine, a 36-foot offshore racing boat, a helicopter, an amphibious airplane, several luxury cars, two four-wheel-drive vehicles, six powerful motorcycles and a $40,000 motor home that McLellan said "were just toys to him."

"He stole for the thrill of it," McLellan said. "He believed in non-violence and never used a gun except in the Wold case, and then it was his accomplices."

The Wold caper was MacLean's downfall. That's when McLellan got on his trail.

On Jan. 27, 1979, two gunmen and MacLean barged into the Fort Lauderdale home of Dr. Keith Wold. The trio bound Wold and were methodically looting
